BLM releases partial land sale list

By The Times-News
and United Press International

BOISE — The Bureau of Land Management, adding fuel to an Idaho political controversy, disclosed Wednesday that it has classified 295,000 acres of federally owned land in Idaho for possible sale.

The list spells out, by BLM district, the number of acres available for immediate sale and the amount that would be available if land-use plans were amended.

However, conservationists termed the list "virtually meaningless" because it contained no information about where the parcels are located.

Pat Ford, the executive director for the Idaho Conservation League, said the ICL would pursue its request for additional information through the federal Freedom of Information Act.

Attorney General David Leroy said at a news conference that the list was the first to be released for any state under the administration's current land inventory and disposal program.

He said Idaho was allowed to look at the inventory earlier than scheduled because of a telephone request made earlier Wednesday to Interior Secretary James Watt by Leroy and Lt. Gov. Phil Batt.

Leroy and Batt said they sought early release of the Idaho inventory to demonstrate that state officials could get results through simple cooperation with federal officials.

They said their approach was better than the "grandstanding demands" of Gov. John Evans and state Sen. Mike Mitchell, D-Lewiston, who supported an unsuccessful State Land Board motion earlier this month that sought the immediate release of the inventory.

Batt is challenging Evans, a Democrat, for the governorship, while Leroy and Mitchell are paired off in the lieutenant governor's race.

The BLM's refusal to make public a list of the lands it was considering for possible sale has sparked a battle among those four officials and other Idaho political candidates.

"This issue has been badly misplayed in Idaho, for political reasons," Leroy said. "There is no fearful, secret plan (to sell off massive amounts of public land). They (Mitchell and Evans) are wrong on this issue, and they always have been wrong."

The acreage listed in the inventory represents about 2.5 percent of the BLM-controlled land in Idaho.

ICL's Ford, however, said the disclosure did nothing to end the debate, and that Mitchell and Evans are right in pursuing details of the land inventory.

He said no information was presented on inventories submitted by the Army Corps of Engineers, the Forest Service and the Bureau of Reclamation.

The goal of $17 billion from public land sales, mentioned frequently by Mitchell, Evans and the ICL, was obtained directly from the president's Property Review Board, Ford said.

He noted that the BLM figures

Costa Mendez resignation turned down

By United Press International

The architect of Argentina's invasion of the Falkland Islands, Foreign Minister Nicanor Costa Mendez, submitted his resignation Wednesday in the aftermath of the Argentine defeat.

President Leopoldo Galtieri reportedly turned down the resignation.

In a communique Wednesday explaining the reasons for Britain's "partial triumph" in the Falklands war, the Argentine military command charged U.S. and European support for Britain played in a key role in the defeat of its forces.

But the command, saying its troops were outnumbered and its equipment outclassed, said the cease-fire signed Monday only ended the battle for the islands' capital of Stanley and included only forces stationed on the islands.

In London, British officials warned that "hundreds" of the 15,000 war-weary Argentine prisoners on the islands could die from exposure, starvation and disease because there is not enough shelter to protect them from the bitter cold.

Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher said she would hold some of the prisoners, including officers, until the Argentine junta confirmed that all hostilities had ended on the reclaimed British territory in the South Atlantic.

But Galtieri, in a nationwide address Tuesday evening preceded by massive anti-government riots by a crowd of 10,000 people, made no mention of defeat.

Galtieri, commander of the Argentine Army, warned Britain and any internal "traitors" that Argentina would keep waging its battle for the islands it calls the Malvinas.

At no time did he mention the surrender document Argentine Gen. Mario Menendez and British field commander Gen. Jeremy Moore signed Monday in the islands' capital of Stanley.

British officials released a copy of the document, which showed Menendez had crossed out the word "unconditional" before surrender. The agreement called on the Argentines to turn over all weapons and ammunition and assemble at points named by British commanders.

Costa Mendez, who Tuesday blamed the Argentine defeat on the superior weaponry and intelligence capacities of Britain and the United States, turned in his resignation during a four-hour meeting of the junta Wednesday morning, government sources said.

PLO seeks U.S. help

By United Press International

Israel said its Christian allies captured a commanding guerrilla outpost at a college annex in south Beirut Wednesday.

The badly outgunned PLO appealed to Washington for "face to face" talks to end Israel's 11-day invasion before a bloodbath engulfs the capital.

Saudi Arabia warned it may take "the necessary measures" — including a possible oil embargo — if President Reagan fails to force Israel out of Lebanon.

Egyptian Foreign Minister Kamal Hassan Ali met with Reagan for 45 minutes and warned "risks of a larger conflict loom over the horizon."

Reagan, who aides said will meet Monday with Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin unless a "major blow up" occurs in combat, promised to "employ every effort" to form a "lasting and enduring" cease-fire.

In an apparent effort to assist Begin in his delicate talks, Israel said none of its 25,000 troops were engaged in combat Wednesday.

Defense Minister Ariel Sharon said, however, its forces will stay in Lebanon until a cease-fire guarantees its demands — a 25-mile security belt free of guerrillas on Israel's northern border, total withdrawal of PLO and Syrian forces and creation of a strong central Lebanese government.

"The Lebanese now have a golden opportunity to sort out their internal political affairs" and "take its destiny in its own hands," Sharon said. He vowed Israel will not invade Beirut.

Israeli Army Chief of Staff Lt. Gen. Rafael Eitan on a front-line tour of Beirut said the invasion crushed the PLO. In Sidon alone, Israel captured hundreds of tons of weapons in 30 warehouses.

One contained 60 tons of long-range Katyusha rockets, Sagger anti-tank rockets, grenades, ammunition, Kalachnikov rifles and artillery shells.

"The infrastructure of the terrorist in Lebanon has been destroyed as well as their political structure," Eitan told Israel Radio.

In Beirut, Hani al-Hassan, PLO chief Yasser Arafat's top political adviser, said in an interview the PLO stood ready to discuss even the laying

Budget leaders' agreement shaky

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Republicans trying to resolve differences in the House and Senate versions of the 1983 budget reached a tentative agreement early Wednesday.

But it soon began unraveling and leaders scrambled to save it.

"We thought we had an agreement, and now people seem to be throwing monkey wrenches into the works," House Republican leader Bob Michel of Illinois told United Press International in late afternoon.

Asked if opposition to the tentative budget compromise was coming from his own Republicans or from conservative "Boll Weevil" Democrats, Michel said, "No. Maybe it's the administration."

The trouble spot is "probably the darn defense figure," he said.

In closed GOP meetings throughout the day, Senate Republicans tentatively agreed — among other things — to accept the House target for military spending in 1983 — about $2 billion lower than the Senate figure.

Congressional sources said the Senate's acceptance of the House total for defense upset Sen. John Tower, R-Texas, chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee, and he threatened to withhold his support from the final budget resolution if it contained the House's defense total.

Acceptance of the Senate defense total would add $2 billion to the 1983 deficit, already projected in the tentative agreement to be about $104 billion. House Republicans want to hold the deficit to around $100 billion.

Senate and House Republicans met privately for about two hours Wednesday night to try to work out their differences, and planned to meet again early Thursday.

"We're very close," Senate Budget Committee Chairman Pete Domenici, R-N.M., said afterward. Asked if the deficit would still be around $104 billion, he replied, "We're down from that (figure)."

Tower refused to say if he was able to force his colleagues to go with the Senate's target numbers on defense spending, but he was in a jovial mood following the meeting.

The full Senate-House conference committee, whose task is to blend the two budgets into one final product acceptable to both chambers, met briefly late in the day to begin work on the GOP-written budgets — endorsed by President Reagan — that passed each house.

But it broke up for the day without progress, and another meeting was scheduled for today.

Republicans expect to try again for agreement among themselves today. Democratic members say they will not try to block passage of a GOP compromise budget.

The tentative agreement was drafted during a closed meeting that included Senate GOP leader Howard Baker of Tennessee, Michel and Republican members of the committee.

Republican leadership sources said the compromise had a deficit of between $104 billion and $105 billion.

Republicans agreed to limit cost-of-living increases next year to 4 percent for federal employees and for recipients of government benefit programs, except Social Security, railroad retirement and disabled veterans.

House OKs debated mortgage subsidy program

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Risking a presidential veto, the House voted Wednesday for a compromise $3 billion mortgage subsidy program to aid homebuyers and the depressed housing industry.

The decision came as the House approved the 1982 supplemental appropriations compromise and sent it to the Senate, which is expected also to approve the plan despite administration opposition.

The House-Senate conference report was adopted by voice vote.

Budget director David Stockman has warned that the administration considers the housing bail-out plan "particularly unacceptable, both in concept and in budgetary terms."

He said President Reagan also objects to other provisions of the bill and asked the House Republican leadership to try to defeat the legislation.

"From every evidence we have it will be vetoed," Rep. John Myers, R-Ind., told his colleagues.

"Does anyone here question or think we could override a veto, either in this body or the other (Senate)? I think most recognize we would not override," Myers said.

House Speaker Thomas O'Neill, at his regular morning news conference, declined to answer a question about whether the House could override.

The House originally voted for a $1 billion housing assistance program. The Senate put the figure at $5.1 billion and the conference committee settled for $3 billion.

In the Senate, the housing program was backed by Sen. Richard Lugar, R-Ind., normally a close administration ally. Lugar had hoped to persuade Reagan to sign the bill to revive the housing industry.

It was estimated the program would create 210,000 housing starts and 500,000 jobs.

The bill would provide mortgage interest rate subsidies of up to 4 percent for home buyers, to begin any time the Federal Home Loan Bank Board's interest rate index exceeds 12.5 percent for a two-month period.

The overall supplemental bill also contains $2.4 billion for the Environmental Protection Agency's waste water projects; $1.3 billion for the guaranteed student loan program, $300 million more than the administration asked; $1 billion for food stamps, and $48 million for the Coast Guard.

The House also set the stage for a showdown with the Senate by voting, 381-29, to limit any outside income earned by members of Congress to just 30 percent of their regular $60,662 annual salary.

The House has a 30 percent limit on outside earned income, but the Senate voted last year to eliminate the ceiling for its members.

New housing starts jumped last month

WASHINGTON (UPI) — New housing construction surged a "surprising" 22.3 percent last month, the most vigorous rebound since the end of the 1980 recession, the Commerce Department reported Wednesday.

The improvement took the nation's building rate to 1,086,000 units a year, interrupting a nine-month string of building reports showing a rate below 1 million starts — the longest stretch of such grim housing news since World War II.

Industry spokesmen, involved in a lobbying effort for final passage of a housing aid bill on Capitol Hill, refused to describe the figures as a turnaround.

"We're surprised," said Fred Napolitano, president of the National Association of Home Builders, the largest construction industry trade group. But he said, "This increase certainly should not be interpreted as meaning the recovery is under way," a development he said would have to await a fall in interest rates.

The housing industry's lobbying campaign on Capitol Hill is the largest in years, an attempt to ensure final passage of a $3 billion housing aid program now on its way through Congress. The good news could only dilute the effort, industry officials conceded.

Today's briefing

Argentine income way down

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (UPI) — An annual drop of 31 percent in workers' salaries announced Wednesday is just one sign pointing to expected radical changes in economic policy in the wake of the Falkland Islands defeat.

The nation's 6-year-old experiment with free market economics is in danger of being dropped in favor of a populist, state-directed economy policy, political and economic sources said.

President Leopoldo Galtieri, in a speech to the nation Tuesday night, hinted at changes when he outlined what Argentines can expect in the post-war period.

"Taking into account the opinions of different sectors of the nation, we will revise and correct all that is necessary in our internal and foreign policies," he said.

The Economy Ministry Wednesday said a recent study shows salaries fell about 31 percent from February 1981 to February 1982.

Eitan says PLO destroyed

TEL AVIV (UPI) — Army Chief of Staff Lt. Gen. Rafael Eitan said Wednesday the PLO political and military structure has been destroyed by Israel's lightning thrust into Lebanon.

"The infrastructure of the terrorist in Lebanon has been destroyed as well as their political structure," Eitan said as he toured Israeli army positions in Beirut, Israel Radio reported.

Eitan was quoted as saying Israel does not want to conquer Beirut but "we want the Syrians to leave there."

If the Syrians leave, he said, "we will let them leave with their personal weapons. We didn't come to Lebanon as conquerors but to a place where they wanted us."

Damascus rejected a similar appeal Tuesday for 1,000 of its troops to leave the capital and join the bulk of the Syrian force in the eastern Bekka valley.

Reagan to address U.N.

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Reagan, confident of his earlier proposals to scale down the arms race, will address a U.N. disarmament conference today but is not expected to directly answer a new Soviet pledge against shooting first in a nuclear war.

In past months, Reagan has unveiled a series of plans dealing with disarmament and they are certain to form a centerpiece for his U.N. address, although the White House has kept the exact wording of the speech a closely held secret and would not state if new proposals are to be put forward.

Deputy White House press secretary Larry Speakes said the president's speech primarily would be "a fleshing out of peace proposals."

Polish clergy discuss riots

WARSAW, Poland (UPI) — Leaders of the Polish clergy met in extraordinary session Wednesday to discuss recent provincial anti-state riots.

Some members of the clergy, who asked not to be named, said they feared the violence last Sunday could be used as a pretext to cancel Pope John Paul II's planned trip to his homeland in August.

The government said during the weekend that it would gladly permit the pope to return to his homeland for the 600th anniversary of the feast of the Black Madonna icon in August. But authorities added the visit could only occur in an atmosphere of civil calm.

Bill expands foreign sales

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate Finance Committee Wednesday approved a bill designed to expand American sales in foreign markets and to strengthen enforcement of U.S. rights under international trade agreements.

The committee also approved a non-binding resolution asking President Reagan to consider anti-dumping duties and countervailing duties — placed on lower-priced foreign imports to offset subsidies they receive from their home government — to protect America's steel industry and its exports.

The Reciprocal Trade and Investment Act of 1982, introduced by Republican Sen. John Danforth of Missouri, was approved by a 16-2 vote and sent to the full Senate. Similar legislation is pending before the House.

"The idea of this bill is to close the credibility gap in U.S. trade policy," said Danforth in a statement issued after the committee's decision.

Storms continue in Midwest

By United Press International

A second onslaught of tornadoes and violent thunderstorms in as many days cut a swath through northern Kentucky Wednesday, injuring at least six people and causing "substantial" property damage.

The violent weather — coming on the heels of storms that left 11 people dead Tuesday in a stampede across the Midlands — swept from north central and northeast Kentucky from Winchester to the Ohio River. State police confirmed tornados at Flemingsburg, where five people were injured, and at Vanceburg, where at least one injury was reported.

Mount Sterling, Winchester and parts of Greenup County were hit with heavy storm damage.

Salvadoran army presses

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (UPI) — The army pressed ahead Wednesday with its "largest ever operation" aimed at ousting leftist rebels from a strategic eastern town, but some soldiers reportedly threw down their guns and fled.

The Ministry of Defense said all three of its U.S.-trained battalions — the Atlacatal, Antonal, and Ramon Belloso — are committed to "Operation Morazan," along with other troops that bring the total force to over 4,000 men.

"This operation will last as long as is necessary," said a Ministry of Defense spokesman. "It is the largest ever operation in our history."

Perquin, 72 miles northeast of San Salvador, has been in rebel hands for 11 days, the longest insurgent occupation in the three-year civil war that has cost 33,000 lives.

Reagan promises to help with lasting cease-fire

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Reagan, preparing to hold a White House meeting with Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin, promised Egypt's foreign minister Wednesday to "employ every effort" to bring about a lasting cease-fire in Lebanon.

Reagan conferred for 45 minutes with Foreign Minister Kamal Hassan Ali, who carried an appeal from Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak for the United States to get actively involved in seeking an end to the bloodshed in Lebanon and a solution to the Palestinian problem.

"Higher risks of a larger conflict loom over the horizon," Ali said. "The situation in Lebanon and especially around Beirut is unacceptable. Israeli forces must withdraw from its vicinity. This besieged Arab capital and its government must become free to handle its own destiny."

Aides said Reagan expects to hold a long-scheduled meeting with Begin Monday unless there is a "major blowup" in the Middle East. The meeting previously was in doubt.

All said Reagan promised to "employ every effort to bring about a cease-fire, respected and enduring" and asserted that "more than ever before, he was convinced that the Palestinians must have hope about their future."

The Egyptian diplomat refrained from any criticism of the administration's change in policy from demanding an "immediate" Israeli withdrawal from Lebanon to calling for "eventual" withdrawal after a "period of stabilization."

"The sooner the better," Ali said.

Secretary of State Alexander Haig, who accompanied Ali, said the United States wants "the withdrawal of all foreign forces from Lebanon."

Haig said the fighting between Israeli, Palestinian and Syrian forces will be "one of the major agenda items" for Reagan's meeting with Began.

"At this point, I don't know of anything specific that would be a reason to cancel it," counselor Edwin Meese said.

This was a reversal of a State Department statement Tuesday that the meeting, planned long in advance of Israel's invasion of Lebanon, now was only "tentatively set" in view of the crisis.

down of arms in direct talks with the United States.

"The Americans must practice a new policy toward the Palestinians and talk with us face to face," he said. "To speak is a step. If the Americans make a step to us, everything can be discussed."

But in Washington, PLO spokesman Hatem Hussaini created some confusion about the organization's position by denying that the guerrillas were willing to stop fighting Israeli forces.

"The PLO position is that it will discuss all issues with the Lebanese government after withdrawal of Israeli occupying forces and that it cannot accept the Israeli occupation of Lebanon and will continue to fight against it," he said.

The State Department said it "was prepared to talk to the PLO" only if the PLO recognizes Israel's right to exist — a U.S. policy for three administrations.

"Our policy toward the PLO has not changed," said spokesman Dean Fischer.

At the Vatican, Pope John Paul II urged all sides to "definitively cease every act of war" and prayed that "generosity, wisdom and foresight triumph" so further "vain loss of blood" or "even a real slaughter is avoided."

State-run Beirut Radio and government sources said Israeli troops, backed by tanks and artillery, stormed the guerrilla stronghold at the Lebanese University School of Sciences overlooking the airport, 5 miles south of Beirut.

But an Israeli military spokesman in Tel Aviv said Israeli-backed Christian Phalangists — not regular Israeli troops — battled the PLO at the university.

The PLO news agency WAFA denied losing the outpost and claimed guerrillas killed 14 Israelis in battles amid orange groves in the occupied costal cities of Sidon and Tyre.

The university annex with its sweeping hilltop vistas affords Christian Phalangist troops the chance to lay siege to 6,000 guerrillas trapped in west Beirut and also attack nearby leftist enclaves and guerrilla refugee camps.

"They already have the area trapped and by capturing the university area they have moved a little closer," one military analyst said.

released Wednesday by Leroy show a value of $90.2 million for the 295,000 acres. "They are clearly going to have to sell lots of land to reach figures in the billions."

Mitchell, who served on the Public Lands Advisory Board under former President Jimmy Carter, told The Times-News in an interview Tuesday that he had no objection to selling surplus lands or using the money to reduce the federal deficit.

But he blasted the review board for setting a target before conducting the inventory and for clamping a secrecy lid on the information. Mitchell also criticized Watt for suggesting that outside groups, including real-estate salesmen, be involved in determining which federal parcels should be sold.

"If people think about that, they will laugh themselves silly," he said.

Sen. James McClure, R-Idaho, said the specific values and locations of the land parcels would be listed later in the final report.

Some 168,475 acres on the preliminary list already have been identified by the BLM as potential cultivated agricultural land, and most of it is encumbered by applications for Desert Land Entry, Carey Act or agricultural leases, the senator said.

The second largest group was 109,475 acres classified as "isolated tracts" — land no longer considered useful to the government or thought to be more useful to states, counties or cities.

Another 13,299 acres designated as suitable for transfer or sale could change hands only after existing land-use plans are amended.

Leroy said state officials now will consult land users, conservation groups, legislators and the Idaho congressional delegation before submitting recommendations to the BLM on how the lands proposed for sale should be handled.

Jury could begin deliberating Hinckley case by Friday

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Both sides rested their cases Wednesday in the trial of John W. Hinckley Jr., with the man who shot President Reagan declaring he would not testify to support his insanity defense.

"It's totally my decision," Hinckley told the judge.

The trial, now in its eighth week, headed toward a swift conclusion — closing arguments are to begin today with jury deliberations expected by Friday.

If convicted of the most serious counts against him in the March 30, 1981, attack that wounded Reagan and three other men, Hinckley faces up to life in prison.

If acquitted, the first man to stand trial in 80 years for shooting a president will be committed to a Washington mental hospital for an indefinite period.

U.S. District Judge Barrington Parker sent the jurors home at midafternoon of the 37th day of the trial and met with opposing lawyers to discuss the instructions he will give the jury.

Parker granted Hinckley's request that he be excused from the legal arguments, and the defendant said, "I'll be back tomorrow."

Before court adjourned for the day, prosecutors asked that the judge stress to the jury that legal commitment procedures could allow for Hinckley to be released if he is found insane at the time of the shooting.

The defense is pushing for instructions stressing that a key issue is whether Hinckley specifically intended to kill the president and his other victims.

Before resting, defense lawyers recalled their lead psychiatric expert, Dr. William Carpenter, for a half hour of rare "sur-rebuttal" testimony. Defense lawyer Vincent Fuller sought to rebut testimony that Carpenter, who found Hinckley to be schizophrenic, planted ideas in the 27-year-old loner's mind about mental illness.

Carpenter denied "making suggestions" about Hinckley's symptoms during his interviews with the defendant.

In resting his case, chief prosecutor Roger Adelman introduced as evidence one final chart — a depiction of Hinckley's travels in the months before the shooting.

The 25 prosecution witnesses, including law enforcement officers and government psychiatrists, have portrayed Hinckley as a calculating, crouching gunman who sought fame, revenge over his parents and to prove himself by shooting Reagan.

Parker reluctantly agreed to let the defense call two more psychiatrists in support of their argument Hinckley was driven by obsessions and suicidal impulses on the day of the shooting.

The judge, in permitting testimony from Carpenter and Dr. James Evans of Washington, noted the defense already had called nearly a dozen medical witnesses.

"I think there's either enough there to guide the jury or confuse the jury," Parker remarked.

Fuller said limits Parker placed on Evans' testimony were so strict that he would not call him.

Falklands

Military sources said the junta was angered by Costa Mendez' use of the word "surrender" Tuesday when talking of the Argentine defeat.

Government sources say Costa Mendez began planning Argentina's invasion of the Falklands as early as last year, after Argentine officials became impatient with status negotiations with Britain that had dragged on for over 16 years.

Official sources also said Interior Minister Alfredo Saint Jean had offered to resign in the midst of the worst crisis rocking the military government since it came to power six years ago.

Presidential spokesman Rodolfo Baltierrez refused to comment on the resignation offers.

Military sources said the nation's top generals were holding meetings throughout the day "to analyze the political situation."

British officials warned that Argentina's delay in officially confirming an end to fighting — on the sea, in the air and on land — only worsens the plight of Argentine troops.

Unless the Argentine prisoners are evacuated quickly — which seems unlikely in view of the political upheaval shaking the Argentine government — "the military authorities on the Falklands could have a major disaster on their hands," Foreign Secretary Francis Pym said in a British Broadcasting Corp. radio interview.

Pym said once Britain had an assurance the fighting has ended, it would ask its allies to end economic sanctions against Argentina, whose ailing economy was yet another casualty of the 10-week war with Britain.

NICANOR COSTA MENDEZ
Invasion architect

British task force commander Rear Adm. Sandy Woodward, in a message released by Mrs. Thatcher's office, said "hundreds could die from malnutrition, hypothermia and disease unless Argentina declares an immediate end to all hostilities."

With 8,000-mile supply lines and the task force still threatened by the Argentine Air Force, "The problems of bringing medical aid, food supplies, warm clothing and shelter are increased to the point of impossibility," he said.

"This is a problem of the Argentines' own making," he said. "It was foolishness to put 15,000 troops out on a limb where they could not be resupplied."

ERA sit-in halts state debate

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (UPI) — A dozen Equal Rights Amendment supporters Wednesday staged a sit-in on the floor of the Illinois House, forcing the chamber to adjourn early and endangering votes for the amendment.

The women, calling themselves the "Grass Roots Group of Second Class Citizens," sat cross-legged in front of the podium of Republican House Speaker George Ryan — a staunch ERA foe — and chanted the words to the amendment.

Ryan attempted to hold business despite the chants, but the noise — aided by a packed gallery of more than 300 people — triggered a motion for adjournment by GOP House Majority Leader Arthur Telcser of Chicago.

However, before the chamber adjourned, several lawmakers who favor the ERA threatened to pull their votes as a result of the demonstration.

"I am pretty damn tired of hearing this harangue," said Rep. Peter Peters, R-Chicago. "I am in fact slowly but surely feeling that I'm going to change my vote for the first time in 10 years."

Peters, a member of the GOP House leadership, also threatened to ask other Republicans to switch yes votes to no.

Harry Yourell, D-Oak Lawn, pleaded with the women to leave the chamber.

Fake IDs cost government billions

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The government may be losing $15 billion to $24 billion yearly to tax and welfare cheaters using false Social Security numbers, and Sen. William Roth called Wednesday for the administration to find a way to stop it.

The bogus numbers are used to collect illegal tax refunds and to receive unearned welfare payments and other benefits, witnesses told the Senate Permanent Subcommittee on Investigations during two days of hearings on the problem.

"I think this is a critical problem that has to be addressed at the highest level of government," said Roth, R-Del., the committee chairman.

Internal Revenue Service Commissioner Roscoe Egger Jr. said he had "no way" to estimate how much is lost to people using false Social Security numbers to claim illegal tax refunds.

He described one program he said has been "dramatically successful" in spotting such cheating — some of it by IRS's own employees.

Other government officials and committee staff investigators have estimated that use of forged identification documents may be costing the government from $15 billion to as much as $24 billion a year.

Roth was joined by Sen. Warren Rudman, R-N.H., in calling for safeguards against the use of false Social Security numbers, passports, birth certificates, drivers' licenses and Immigration and Naturalization Service documents to gouge the government.

Watt plan doesn't provide assurances

In the two years he's been in office, we've learned to treat what Interior Secretary James Watt says with a large dose of caution. His views, we have often found, are shaped by his experience as an attorney for developers, not as someone who needs to weigh many perspectives in the management of federal land.

Watt's statement this week on the proposed sale of so-called surplus federal land did little to allay our concerns. Yes, he said, the government hoped to raise "billions" by selling up to 5 percent of all federal land, much of it in the Rockies.

But no, he said, there would not be a "massive sell-off." No, he said, there would not be any sales from within national parks, wildlife refuges or Indian trust lands, nor of land with "unique characteristics and national values" such as wilderness areas, wild and scenic rivers, historic trails or national conservation areas.

He added that there would be no sales before 1984, but that any sales would be preceded by careful reviews.

All of this sounded good to us. The government has refused to say what parcels it is considering for sale, and with that refusal, suspicion has been mounting that more is involved than a few old airplane hangars.

But Watt's assurances ring much softer with his additional comments that outside groups, such as the National Association of Realtors, should be doing the recommending on which land parcels should be sold.

His reasoning is that federal government agencies have a "possessory management" relationship, and thus, they are the "wrong" parties to be taking the land inventory. Groups like the Realtors, on the other hand, have what he called a "market orientation" and should be calling the shots.

We disagree. Federal lands belong to all the people, and the precise role of the administrative agencies, both by law and by philosophy, is to manage those lands on behalf of the nation.

A "possessory" philosophy, in our minds, is an appropriate one. In American history, land generally has been treated only as property, as a commodity to be bought and sold at the highest possible price. That philosophy helped develop America economically, but it has often led to extreme despoilage. No one in Idaho wants to see that repeated here.

Until the late 19th century, the government generally cooperated with the despoilers, and if it had not been for the foresightedness of conservationists like Gifford Pinchot and John Muir, the preservation concept might never have taken hold in America. They convinced key politicians, including President Theodore Roosevelt, that without protection, America's vast resources and beauty would be cut down and carved up forever.

In saying he would take the agencies out of their protective role, Watt again shows little sensitivity to that perspective. The National Association of Realtors is likely, we think, to have a how-much-money-will-this-make attitude, seeing lands in terms of their income potential and highest market value. Is that the chief perspective we want in these sales?

Watt ignores the role of the government as an overseer and protector of federal lands for all Americans. We aren't resting any easier with his remarks, and we again urge that the government release the list of lands it thinks can be sold. The public, as well as Watt, should have a larger part of this decision.

IFF can be donor or despoiler

Twin Falls, barely 75 years old, is far younger than most population centers in Idaho, and the people of this area still have some hard lessons to learn about preserving their quality of life. Future generations will never forgive them for some of the tragic blunders they have made, and are making, in the Snake River Canyon and historic Rock Creek.

I.B. Perrine, that visionary pioneer who nurtured the canyon lands even as he reaped from them, is surely a-spin under his tombstone. The latest tragedy is that all eight members of the Twin Falls County Zoning Commission have voted to let an Eastern-owned company spread foul-smelling potato waste on 500 acres at the confluence of the river and Rock Creek.

Golfers at three different country clubs and residents of the adjacent areas in two counties, who have so often gagged at the smell from the city's sewage plant in the canyon, were stunned when a zoning board member, Ralph Jones, said that as long as the canyon already has one sewage plant, it might as well have another one.

Twin Falls might have been just another ugly little town, fast losing its trees and its one beautiful boulevard, if Earl Faulkner, John Roper and other far-seeing downtown leaders hadn't found the courage years ago to accomplish their near-miracle on Main Avenue. Where is that kind of leadership today to help save the natural beauty of the canyon?

Perhaps, at the command of the Twin Falls Chamber of Commerce, they are all too busy writing letters of support to the Easterner and his battery of attorneys, who are siphoning Idaho money into the pockets of out-of-state stockholders. Twin Falls people should never forget that every dollar of profit — repeat, profit — made in Idaho by a "foreign" corporation, leaves Idaho.

Eastern corporations, on the prowl for cheap Western potatoes and gravy, seem to view the Magic Valley as a rich blonde: fat, dumb and happy and so vulnerable. Her unspoiled wealth is tempting. Her often uninformed (and sometimes just plain ignorant) citizen-lawmakers suffer from astigmatism. Elsewhere in the nation, corporations have been forced to spend billions of dollars to clean up the water, air and land they have polluted. Here in Idaho, why should the gate still be wide open for the "rape and ruin of some of the world's most spectacular scenery?" (quote from Joel Garreau's book, The Nine Nations of North America).

Twin Falls leaders are turning their backs on what threatens to be one of the biggest stinks in eight counties. They call it "good for business" and the "inevitability of progress," but by any name, it smells like a skunk in the cash register.

Surely a smart man like Lee Odenwald, with all the money of his national parent corporation, Consolidated Foods, behind him, is resourceful enough to find a better solution to his waste problem. He should not have to smear his sewage in an area where people live and play.

People do use the canyon along here for recreation, those who are able to clamber down the steep trails and roadless cliffs on the Twin Falls side, or those who dare drive down the perilous zigzag road on the Jerome side.

Here, when spring's high water subsides, can be found some of the best channel catfish you ever fried. Many a fisherman parks his camper overnight in the green forest below the waterfalls, so he can be on the spot at first light. Farther down the river, old-timers say, is a fathomless deep hole where the giant sturgeon still live. Can catfish and sturgeon survive on a diet of rotten potato soup, even when it's supposedly "purified" by stagnating in a pond?

People are hungry for the freedom of the canyon lands — hikers, tourists, families, photographers, backpackers, hunters and their dogs, motorcyclists, shooters eager for gun practice, even lovers' lanes. Hardly a day passes that we don't see them at the edge of the canyon, frustrated and stymied because they are forbidden to enjoy what should be their heritage.

Stand at the rim and you can see fantastic rock formations there below. One enormous bullet-shaped rock long ago exploded out its side, evidently a lava cone that swelled and burst with its own heat. It is unique. This kind of natural phenomenon deserves to be available for all the world to see and study, not to be enshrined in a potato toilet bowl and visited only by the trillions of mosquitoes that are sure to flourish in such a rich feeding trough.

We urge Mr. Odenwald to point that nimble brain of his toward another solution and not be in a hurry to pack his bags and return back East, where he came from such a short time ago. Who knows, if he were to stay here and put his mind and money to it, he might even get elected U.S. Senator. Idahoans have been known to be generous that way.

The greatest gift that Mr. Odenwald could give to the community would be this threatened 500 acres of land, clean and unsullied, to be used as a natural park. His name will go down, irrevocably, in Twin Falls history, one way or another, either as despoiler or donor. Of Odenwald's Park? Or Odenwald's Stink?

New sign: Snake River Dump

A funny thing happened on the way to the county zoning commission meeting last week. The beautiful Snake River Canyon was zoned a garbage dump by the commission . . . or at least the first step was taken.

The area where the Rock Creek rushes into the Snake River Canyon was purchased by Idaho Frozen Foods in order that it might scoop out acre-size settling ponds for potato waste.

How many ponds? When asked this at an earlier meeting between IFF representatives and canyon-edge homeowners, the answer was, in essence, "If the ones we dig won't handle the waste, we can dig more. After all, we have 500 acres."

The canyon-edge residents are understandably concerned. But this concern should be shared by anybody living within the scope of the Twin Falls County Zoning Commission.

At the zoning commission meeting last week, the member who made the motion to pass IFF's request did not even know where the area to be affected is. (Although on discussing two other requests brought before the board, a member mentioned having sent people to look over the sites and even had maps to show where these areas were.)

It was stated by one of the commission members — in order to justify changing the zoning in the Snake River Canyon, which up until now, has been "recreational" — that since they'd already allowed the sewage-disposal plant to be constructed in the canyon, they'd set a precedent and, therefore, (Alakazam! The hand is quicker than the eye!) they could, in good conscience, make more of the canyon available to waste of a different sort.

I can just see the big sign which will some day greet visitors as they approach the Perrine Bridge: The Snake River Dump. Courtesy Idaho Frozen Foods and the County of Twin Falls.

Let's protest 'Rainbow' rally

My, my, my. No wonder we are having such an awful time getting the point across to our youths that marijuana is dangerous.

Per the Lewiston Morning Tribune, June 5: 15,000 grass-smoking, clothes-removing Rainbow Children are going to converge at the Payette National Forest near McCall on July 4. I do not believe that our forefathers had this in mind when they declared July 4 Independence Day. Is this what our tax dollars go for?

I am sending a telegram and a letter to Gov. John Evans in protest of such action. If you are with me, do the same. My goal is to have 15,000 protest letters on the governor's desk by the date of July 4. Pitch in and do your part.

We have a very serious drug problem with our youths in the Lewiston area. We have formed a program called Parent Power, which is geared toward the prevention of drug abuse. If these Rainbow People gather on the Fourth of July to smoke an illegal drug and run nude, it will put a damper on our efforts.

Expanded power of police to search vehicles is risky

WASHINGTON — One of the maxims of law is to this effect, that often it is more important that the law be settled than that the law be settled perfectly. The Supreme Court followed this rule a couple of weeks ago when it undertook to stabilize a shaky area of the law having to do with searches of automobiles.

One effect of the decision is to vest more power in police officers than officers have had before. A second effect is to dispel some of the "exclusionary" fog in which trial judges have had to navigate in recent years.

The case is important to every person who drives a car, which is to say, the case is important to just about all of us.

These were the facts. In November 1978, a reliable informant tipped off the District of Columbia police that a suspected drug dealer, Albert Ross Jr., was selling heroin from his car on a certain street in Washington. Police promptly located the car, stopped the driver and searched the vehicle. In the trunk they found a "lunch-type" paper bag and a zippered red leather pouch. Without obtaining a warrant, police opened the bag; it contained heroin. They opened the pouch; it contained $3,200 in currency.

Before his trial for possession of heroin, the defendant contended that the evidence had been obtained in violation of his Fourth Amendment rights. He moved that it be excluded. The trial court denied the motion. The appeals court at first held that the warrant-less search of the paper bag was valid, but the search of the leather pouch was not. Then the court, on rehearing, ruled that neither of the two containers should have been opened without a warrant.

The government appealed to the Supreme Court. On June 1, in a landmark decision by Justice Stevens, the court overruled a string of prior decisions and laid down new rules. Henceforth — or at least until the court changes its mind again — these guidelines will control the admissibility of such evidence:

If the police, having stopped an automobile, have probable cause to believe that a container within the vehicle contains contraband material, the police need not obtain a warrant. They may open the container on the spot. The determination of probable cause must be based upon the kind of objective facts that could justify the issuance of a warrant by a magistrate. The new rule is to apply equally to all containers — to the poor man's paper bag and to the rich man's attache case. The scope of a search must be limited to the object sought; if police are looking for a stolen lawnmower, they cannot open a shoebox on the back seat. Having said all this, the court sent the Ross case back for trial.

Three justices dissented. Justice Marshall, joined in full by Justice Brennan and joined in part by Justice White, spoke with unusual vehemence. The majority opinion, he said, shows contempt for Fourth Amendment values, ignores precedents, is internally inconsistent and produces unjust consequences. The new rules are completely incompatible with Fourth Amendment standards. The majority "utterly disregards the value of a neutral and detached magistrate."

In Justice Marshall's view, no serious obstacle prevented the police from taking the unopened containers before a magistrate. Ross was in custody. The supposed evidence could not have been spirited away. The police needed only to convince a magistrate that a warrant should be issued in order to have made certain that the evidence would not be excluded. Yes, Marshall agreed, the new rules would contribute to "efficiency," but efficiency can never be substituted for due process of law. In an acerbic footnote he inquired, "Is not a dictatorship the most 'efficient' form of government?"

For my own part, I believe the dissenters were right and the majority wrong. The Fourth Amendment's protection against unreasonable searches dates from Magna Carta; it is arguably the most precious of all rights embraced in the Bill of Rights. It strikes me as risky to authorize the police, on their own, to determine probable cause in cases such as these.

At the same time, the new rules will prevent some of the nitpicking, hair-splitting, legalistic technicalities that have permitted guilty men to go free. That much is net gain.

For the rest, we will have to see how the police use the new power they have just acquired.

BLM investigates disappearance of colts from wild herd

GLENNS FERRY (UPI) — Bureau of Land Management officials are investigating the disappearance of about 20 of the colts produced this spring by a wild horse herd south of Glenns Ferry.

Robert Mitchell, manager of the Jarbidge Resource Area of the Boise BLM District, said officials had received reports recently that the young animals were being stolen.

Idaho

"What we think people are doing is harvesting the colts because they're easier to catch," Mitchell said. "Of course, they can do more with a young animal than they can an old animal in the way of training and such."

Mitchell said a BLM investigator is probing reports received from area residents in the past three weeks of several incidences in which colts were allegedly stolen.

BLM officials have some suspicions as to who the culprits may be based upon descriptions provided by residents of the area near the Owyhee County line about 10-20 miles south of Glenns Ferry, Mitchell said.

He said officials do not believe the thefts were committed by the same individuals because descriptions of vehicles differed.

Based upon inventories, Mitchell said officials believe more than 20 colts have been stolen this spring. He said the herd numbers about 70, 50 of which are producing mares.

Mitchell said the BLM inventories the herd late each spring.

"We're finding that we're getting very few young animals with the herds," Mitchell said. "This tends to confirm some of the other feedback that we're getting that people are out there trying to get the new colts."

He said the young colts are easy to raise on bottles once they have been taken from their mothers.

BLM officials in the Jarbidge Resource Area have received more reports of colt-stealing this year than in the past, Mitchell said. He attributed the increase to a growth in use of BLM land by the public early in the spring when the mountains are clogged with snow and not yet accessible.

"People are looking for things to do that are a little exciting," he said. "Naturally to catch a colt and raise it would be in a lot of people's view."

Light taxes for many corporations

BOISE (UPI) — A Tax Commission report released Wednesday showed that nearly 45 percent of all Idaho corporations which filed returns last year paid $30 or less in taxes to the state.

The report, compiled for the commission by Audit Supervisor Phillip Aldape of the Idaho Department of Revenue and Taxation, said 15,401 corporations filed state tax returns for fiscal year 1981.

Of that group, 6,828 paid total taxes of $30 or less, the study said.

A breakdown of taxes paid by the corporations showed 2,756 paid just $30 — a Permanent Building Fund fee plus the minimum franchise tax. The report said another 1,562 paid $20, the franchise charge; 1,352 paid $10, the building fund fee; and 1,158 paid no taxes at all.

In an interdepartmental memo from Aldape to Tax Commission Chairman Larry Looney — the official who asked for the report — the audit supervisor said, "While some of the corporations originally paid $10 or $20 and were subsequently billed for either the Permanent Building Fund tax or the minimum franchise tax, they all are effectively paying the minimum amount required."

Tax commission officials emphasized that figures included in Aldape's report were derived from amounts listed by the corporations when they filed tax returns. Later audits may have increased those amounts, Aldape said. But he added those adjustments were generally minor.

The same report said some 60 Idaho corporations paid taxes totaling $100,000 or more last year. Those companies accounted for 54 percent of all corporate taxes received by the state, pumping $27.5 million into the Idaho treasury.

Man in prison for illegal aliens

BOISE (UPI) — A man charged with transporting illegal aliens from Arizona to Idaho was sentenced to two years in prison Wednesday by U.S. District Judge Harold Ryan.

James Ronald Williams, who pleaded guilty to one count in exchange for the government's motion to dismiss two others against him, faced a maximum five-year term and $2,000 fine.

Ryan Wednesday accepted the government's motion to dismiss two counts and sentenced Williams on the single, remaining count.

He originally was charged with illegally transporting three Mexican nationals from Nogales, Ariz., to Idaho on March 13.

Parks department unable to cut back

BOISE (UPI) — The Idaho Parks and Recreation Department has not been able to fully comply with Gov. John Evans' mandate to reduce workweeks to 32 hours because of the timing of the cutbacks, officials said Wednesday.

Department officials told the Idaho Parks and Recreation Board Wednesday during a meeting conducted via telephone conference call that the state's parks already had been opened for the summer when the workweek reductions were ordered.

Employees have been forced to work overtime at the parks for safety, protection and maintenance reasons, department officials said.

The department was ordered to reduce expenditures for the remaining weeks of fiscal year 1982, which ends June 30, by $61,000. The report said the department will achieve that amount through salary savings, by postponing purchases, delaying the opening of facilities and reducing maintenance.

McClure wants answer to school impact aid

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. James McClure has demanded that the U.S. Education Department immediately give an explanation of whether it plans to distribute full allotments of federal impact aid to affected Idaho school districts.

The Idaho Republican said Wednesday he was responding to complaints from several school district officials in the state that funding may be cut 10 percent to 25 percent "despite ironclad assurances made earlier by the Department of Education that the impact aid funding would not be tampered with."

Impact aid is distributed to school districts which are financially buoyed by nearby federal facilities.

Stubborn Helms continues delay of Voting Act

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Senate leaders tried Wednesday to budge a stubborn Jesse Helms and begin debating an extension of key provisions of the 1965 Voting Rights Act.

The North Carolina Republican continued to delay action despite Tuesday's 86-8 vote to limit debate on whether to take up the bill barring discrimination in election laws. The bill has been passed by the House and is backed by President Reagan and at least 77 of the 100 senators.

Assistant GOP leader Ted Stevens said he was not yet alarmed by Helms' refusal to let the Senate proceed to the substance of the bill, and told reporters, "There are ways we could terminate this" filibuster.

He was not specific, but said there would be some "interesting skirmishing" behind the scenes to get Helms to yield. During the early part of Wednesday's session, Stevens was at the front of the chamber consulting the rule book and the parliamentarian.

Soon after, Stevens, acting in the absence of GOP leader Howard Baker, moved to require all senators to answer time-consuming quorum calls — shortening the delays imposed by filibuster leaders and forcing them to keep speaking and using their remaining time.

But by mid-afternoon the slow pace of repeated quorum calls irritated the bill's sponsor, Sen. Charles Mathias, R-Md.

"What's happening is obvious. We're just killing time with quorum calls and there's urgent business," he complained. "Ten percent of the country is out of work, there's a 100 billion dollar deficit, there are trouble spots all over the world and we're sitting here listening to our names being recited by the clerk."

Helms, however, chose to call it "this period of enlightenment."

Under the rules, Helms and the seven others who voted against cloture Tuesday could speak for up to three hours apiece and request quorum calls for up to 100 hours.

As long as they block action on the Voting Rights Act bill — extending the requirement that all or part of 22 states clear proposed election law changes with the Justice Department — no other matters can come before the Senate.

Among the agenda items dear to Helms are a balanced budget constitutional amendment, extension of the debt ceiling, an urgent supplemental appropriation bill and an eventual conference report on President Reagan's budget.

The Senate recessed in late afternoon after negotiations collapsed over setting a time limit to call the bill up and then lay it aside to vote on the urgent supplemental appropriation.

White House likes Donovan despite growing opposition

WASHINGTON (UPI) — With pressure growing for the ouster of Labor Secretary Raymond Donovan, President Reagan's top aide said Wednesday no action is planned until the results are in from a special prosecutor's investigation.

White House counselor Edwin Meese said there are no plans to ask Donovan to step aside. Donovan is under investigation for alleged ties to organized crime.

Senate Labor Committee chairman Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, said "nobody really expects" the special probe will fully refute the suggestion Donovan is linked to the underworld.

Hatch, at a news conference on Capitol Hill, noted that one man questioned in the investigation was discovered dead in a car trunk with a bullet in his brain. "I don't think they (the allegations against the Donovan) can be resolved short of bringing people back to life," he said.

Meese, in a Mutual Broadcasting System interview, said: "The president has previously expressed his confidence in Mr. Donovan and indicated that he will stay on the job pending the outcome of this investigation and I would see no reason to change that."

Hatch, who discussed calls for Donovan's ouster with Meese Tuesday, said he did not call for his resignation. Also Tuesday, Senate Democrats in a letter to Reagan called for Donovan to "step aside" until special prosecutor Leon Silverman completes his investigation.

Donovan is in Switzerland attending a conference of the International Labor Organization. He plans to return to Washington Sunday after a few days of vacation.

Hatch said Donovan needs bipartisan support in Congress to function effectively and that "if the special prosecutor's report comes out and resolves, these reports for Mr. Donovan, then I would expect that our 46 Democrats would immediately withdraw their letter.

"But nobody really expects that to be the case. I think there will be a number of unresolved allegations," said Hatch, who noted "the odds favor departure" of the Cabinet member.

Silverman was appointed last December to investigate charges Donovan was present at the 1977 bribery of a union official and other allegations linking him to organized crime figures while he was an executive of a New Jersey construction firm.

Silverman would not say when the report will be ready, but said, "It will not be long delayed."

The moves by Hatch and the Democrats followed the gangland-style slaying of a former Teamster questioned in the Donovan probe and new disclosures concerning the amount of information withheld by the FBI last year from the Labor Committee while it was considering Donovan's confirmation.

Hatch's call to Meese was prompted by the delivery of additional materials by the FBI to the committee bearing on the allegations leveled against Donovan, a source said.

Paul Smith, Hatch's press secretary, told UPI the senator advised the White House Tuesday that Donovan cannot escape unscathed.

Commissioners back House phone action

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The nation's utility commissioners Wednesday endorsed a House bill they said would help prevent drastic increases in telephone bills after the proposed breakup of American Telephone & Telegraph Co.

"We believe that the enactment of such legislation is now of paramount public concern and urgency because of the AT&T antitrust settlement agreement announced on Jan. 8, 1982," said Edward Burke, president of the National Association of Regulatory Utility Commissions.

"Its implementation, unattended by remedial congressional legislation, could result in precipitous and unnecessary increases in local telephone rates ..." Burke, who is also a Rhode Island public utilities commissioner, said at a news conference.

Under an agreement with the Justice Department to settle a 6-year-old antitrust suit, AT&T would spin off its 22 majority-owned telephone companies in exchange for being allowed, for the first time, to compete in lucrative fields such as data processing and computer services.

The agreement stipulates that the divested companies would be limited to providing basic telephone service.

Fugitive lured from Libya haven

NEW YORK (UPI) — Fugitive ex-CIA agent Edwin Wilson, lured from a safe haven in Libya in an international trap set by the government, will be moved to Washington to face charges he trained Libyan terrorists, authorities said Wednesday.

Wilson, who was arrested Tuesday at Kennedy Airport after being hustled aboard a U.S.-bound plane in the Dominican Republic, waived his right in federal court Wednesday to a hearing on his removal to Washington.

Wilson, a tall, white-haired man in a dark business suit, was taken from the courtroom by two U.S. marshals. Assistant U.S. Attorney Lawrence Barcella said Wilson, 54, would be taken to Washington for arraignment.

Wilson's lawyer, John Keats, said he believed his client might be arraigned in Washington on Friday or Monday.

Barcella declined to say when Wilson would be transferred to Washington. The former fugitive is being held in lieu of $20 million bail set Tuesday.

Government sources said Wilson was ensnared in a year-long Justice Department operation to entice him out of Libya, where he had lived since 1980.

The sources said associates of Wilson acting for the Justice Department told the former CIA agent that he would be safe in the Dominican Republic and would be able to conduct his business operations in the Carribean nation.

Wilson, traveling on an Irish passport in the name of Philip McCormick, flew from Spain to the Dominican Republic on Tuesday morning, where he was immediately taken into custody by Dominican officials tipped to his travel plans and placed aboard a plane for the U.S., authorities said.

Wilson and an ex-CIA associate, Frank Terpil, were indicted in 1980 and 1981 on a variety of charges, including illegally exporting explosives, detonators and sensitive night vision equipment to Libya, and providing training for Libyan terrorists.

Terpil is still at large and is believed by federal law enforcement officials to be in Beirut, Lebanon, a city encircled by Israeli forces.

Radioactive debris in back yard troubles Cleveland couple

CLEVELAND (UPI) — A Cleveland couple whose back yard is littered with radioactive debris said Wednesday they will put the wastes on their front lawn the Fourth of July "for all the world to see" unless the government removes it.

Eugene and Joan Skiljan have been told it will take state and federal officials a year to remove vials of radioactive radium from their back yard, along with dirt the radioactive vials have contaminated.

Hundreds of the vials, labeled "U.S. Radium Corp. — Poison," were discovered last April when Skiljan was dismantling a brick backyard barbecue. Later other vials of the brown liquid were found in the back yard, apparently buried there 30 years ago by a previous owner who operated a company that made luminescent watches using radium.

State officials have surveyed the area and already appropriated $100,000 for the cleanup, but the cost is expected to reach almost $300,000. State officials are awaiting additional funding approval from Washington before starting.

"We've been pretty patient," said Skiljan, 51, who is disabled by a back injury. "We are very disappointed now. You know how the government works."

The vials of radium were placed in plastic bags by health workers, and if action is not taken to remedy the problem, Skiljan says he'll place the bags in the front yard to call attention to his plight.

"Maybe if we put it on our front yard, and put up a sign saying, 'Radioactive,' it will shake them up. If we don't get a commitment from somebody by the Fourth of July our American flag comes down, and we'll haul the radioactive stuff out for all the world to see."

Skiljan is skeptical of comments from health officials, who say there is no immediate danger from the radioactive wastes because of the low level of radiation.

"Our friends don't want to come here," he said. "Our four grandchildren can't play in the back yard."

State health official Robert Quillin said he sympathizes with the Skiljans, but said the matter is now up to the federal government.

"Ohio EPA (Environmental Protection Agency) has forwarded a letter to U.S. EPA to include (the Skiljans) in one of 400 special sites," he said.

GOP head says ads not pulled

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The head of the Republican Party's congressional campaign committee Wednesday denied a White House comment that controversial advertisments with actors playing Speaker Thomas O'Neill and Jimmy Carter had been withdrawn.

Edward Rollins, President Reagan's White House political adviser, said Tuesday in Houston that the plug had been pulled on the $2.6 million campaign that parodied the speaker and former president.

But Rep. Guy Vander Jagt, R-Mich., chairman of the National Republican Congressional Committee, issued a statement that said the ads were not withdrawn prematurely and had "run their course."

"No ads were pulled and no agency was fired," he said.

"It's unfortunate that Mr. Rollins misunderstood the status of the advertising program designed by the National Republican Congressional Committee and the Republican National Committee. The ads that have been referred to have run their course — totally and completely.

"We decided to bring the process back to Washington and are working on the developpment of the next phase of commercials."

The ad campaign showed the Carter and O'Neill fakes chuckling over huge deficts for which the Republicans would like to blame the Democrats.

But O'Neill did not think them funny, and went on the attack Wednesday.

He said the ads' assertion that Reagan had inherited the recession was a "bogus claim."

"Apparently, the president himself did not get the word. In his speech last night (at a politicl fundraiser in Houston), he once again tried to shift blame for the recession to his predecessor. He also repeated another bogus statement, that 'there have been no budget cuts,'" O'Neill said.

"Both these statements are a desperate attempt to escape blame for the two most important results of administration policy: massive unemployment and brutal cuts in the social safety net."

Funds wanted for changes in Tris policy

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Because the government first encouraged the use of Tris and then banned products treated with it, Congress has a duty to compensate firms that lost money in the process, lawmakers from textile states said Wednesday.

In the early 1970s, the government encouraged clothing manufacturers to use Tris, a fire-retardent chemical, for treating children's sleepwear. But Tris was later found to cause cancer in rats, and products treated with it were banned.

The Senate has four times passed bills that would authorize federal payments to companies hurt by the change in government policy. The House went along in the Carter administration, but the measure was killed by a pocket veto.

This year the legislation passed the House and Rep. Carroll Campbell, R-S.C., said the White House told him that despite the importance of holding down federal spending President Reagan would not oppose the bill.

"We're dealing with the rights of companies to be compensated for over-regulation," Campbell said.

He said $56 million is estimated to be the maximum amount the government will be forced to pay if the bill becomes law, but it is more likely the total bill would be about $30 million.

"The textile and apparel industries have been unfairly regulated by the federal government, and in doing so, have suffered losses that are not their fault," Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C. told a House Judiciary subcommittee.

"The harm of this ban to industry has been in many instances catastrophic and irreparable. It imposed an immediate obligation upon the apparel manufacturers to repurchase the garments they had sold. It has left the entire industry without adequate recourse or remedy," he said.

Rep. Albert Gore, D-Tenn., said he thinks compensation is in order, but he wants the legislation drawn so some firms that sought to circumvent the final order to pull Tris-treated products from the market would not benefit.

What's what

Will you buy the reported claim of matrimony expert William Lederer that four out of five marriages are bad? Our Love and War man thinks those figures are a bit pessimistic. He believes most marriages are both bad and good, depending on the economy, the weather and what's for dinner. Even so, he doesn't argue with Mr. Lederer's contention: "Hardly anyone marries when they're in love—they're in heat."

Report is Robert Redford turned down $1 million, choosing not to do five yogurt commercials. Redford's services would be much in demand, if he chose to take on that line of work, no doubt about it. Still, he's not the elusive personality most wanted by the advertisers. Walter Cronkite is.

BLUE JEANS

Q. How much did the first blue jeans cost?

A. $13.50 a dozen. Those were Levi Strauss' first in 1874.

Earliest auctions in the record at hand go back to 450 B.C. in Babylon where young ladies in good physical condition were sold on the block.

Q. How come a resort built around a mineral spring is called a "spa"?

A. Because "Spa" is the name of the Belgian town where the first of same got started.

If you want that bar of soap to last longer, unwrap it and let it dry before you use it, maybe in a drawer to perfume up your linens or whatever.

WATERMELON

What, you still can't tell whether the watermelon is ripe? Check the ground spot on its underside. If it's yellow, it's ripe. If it's white, it's not. Check the tendril on the nonstalk end. If it's dried and brown, it's ripe. Then for the benefit of onlookers, thump that melon. If it sounds, hollow, that will impress them.

"Don't bite the hand that feeds you" translates in some African tongues as "Don't tell the man who's carrying you that he stinks." Doesn't sing.

You can figure about 130,000 Americans are camping out in some national park tonight.

'Top of the heap' people don't follow Emily Post

By United Press International

ZINGER

Do President Reagan and Queen Elizabeth II show lack of breeding in the way they hold their wineglasses? In a letter in the New York Times Wednesday Paul Singer of Summit, N.J., said for years he's watched movie and TV actors "holding wine glasses the wrong way" because they don't know you're supposed to grab the stem. Yet, noted Singer, there were the president of the United States and the queen of England — "two 'top of the heap' people" — toasting each other" (in a June 9 UPI picture), their fingers "clenched around the bowl of the glass. . ." "The New Emily Post's Etiquette" says, "Wineglasses should be picked up by the stem rather than the bowl" because that keeps white wine and champagne cool, and lets you see the nice color if it's red.

TERRY'S TRIAL

Terry Mooré is getting nowhere with her claim she married Howard Hughes and thus ought to share in the late billionaire's estate. The actress claims she married Hughes in 1949 on a yacht off San Diego, although she can't remember the date or the name of the yacht, and the captain she says performed the ceremony is dead. Hughes died in 1976 while flying to Houston. A Texas probate court had denied the 50-year-old Ms. Moore's claim to Hughes' estate, a decision the Texas Supreme Court in Austin upheld Wednesday with no comment.

SWAN SONGS

A decade after the Watergate break-in, there's "Watergate, A Musical." Now in rehearsal in Atlanta, the show includes "The Break-In Ballet" and "Wiretap Blues," sung by the "Plumbers;" "Fools," by Martha Mitchell;" and "Can't We Keep It Simple?" by Pat Nixon." Gene Barry plays Richard Nixon and gets to belt out such ditties as "Where Do I Go From Here?" The story has a kid sneaking into the Oval Office during a White House tour and finding Nixon packing up after his resignation. The show was written and scored by Tommy Oliver and Edward Lakso and opens in Atlanta July 7 for a month, then starts a tour they hope will lead to Broadway.

TAINTED WORDS

"Jerzy Kosinski," author of such best-sellers as "The Painted Bird" and "Being There," received "compositional help" from assistants who wrote parts of his books, according to a story published Wednesday in the Village Voice. The New York weekly quoted a Kosinski assistant, Barbara Mackey, as saying, "The ideas were all his . . . but the words were often mine. All I did was put it in English." The Polish-born Kosinski won the National Book book award in 1969 for his novel "Steps" and recently appeared in Warren Beatty's movie "Reds." He was in Paris and unavailable for comment on the article, titled "Jerzy Kosinski's Tainted Words," but was quoted in the Voice as saying of his books that "not a single word is not mine."

DO IT YOURSELF

Not that he's looking for competition, but "Roots" author Alex Haley says families should interview elderly relatives for their own history. "If a family elder is permitted to die before someone in that family can interview them . . . it's like a library that has burned down," the 60-year-old Haley told a University of Hartford (Conn.) audience Tuesday. The author, who won a Pulitzer Prize for "Roots," said family histories and reunions make for stronger family ties and are important to a person's development.

Dietary changes help reduce cancer risks

By D'VERA COHN
United Press International

WASHINGTON — The National Academy of Sciences said Wednesday Americans can reduce their chances of getting cancer by cutting down on fat, salt-cured foods and alcohol, and eating more fruit, vegetables and whole grains.

A scientific committee of the academy's National Research Council cited reports that diet could be responsible for up to 40 percent of cancer in men and 60 percent in women. But it could not make any estimate — and said much is still unknown — about the relationship between diet and cancer.

"Our recommendations should not be regarded as assuring a cancer-free life," study chairman Dr. Clifford Grobstein told a news conference. "But the weight of the evidence in favor of preventive measures is growing, and we believe a significant reduction in cancer incidence can be achieved by modifying our diet, as well as changing smoking habits.

"Cancer is not as inevitable as death and taxes," he said.

The committee's $1 million report, "Diet, Nutrition and Cancer," was a massive review of worldwide cancer studies. Cancer causes 20 percent of U.S. deaths.

The committee said:

•Consumption of saturated and unsaturated fats, now 40 percent of total calories in the average U.S. daily diet, should be cut to 30 percent.

Americans typically consume fat in meat, whole milk dairy products and cooking oil. Fat is associated with cancer of the breast, prostate and large bowel, and of all dietary components studied it is most strongly linked to cancer.

•Fruits, vegetables and whole grain cereal products should be eaten daily.

Particularly recommended are those high in vitamins A and C, including citrus, dark green leafy vegetables such as spinach, carrots, winter squash, tomatoes, cabbage, cauliflower, brussel sprouts and broccoli.

•Consumption of salt-cured, salt-pickled and smoked foods "should be minimized."

Countries that consume large amounts of these foods, such as China, Japan and Iceland, have higher rates of cancer of the esophagus and stomach.

•Excessive drinking, especially when combined with cigarette smoking, "has been associated with an increased risk of cancer of the upper gastrointestinal and respiratory tracts." If alcohol is consumed, it should be "in moderation."

The committee's recommendations are similar to those of many nutritionists. Grobstein described it as "a prudent diet for general health," and said it could help prevent other conditions, such as heart disease, as well.

The panel made no recommendation on caffeine, saying the book is still open.

Grobstein, an experimental biologist at the University of California at San Diego, said evidence indicates physcial damage caused by a bad diet may be reversible with better eating habits.

The National Cattlemen's Association, in a reply, said "a disservice is done to the public as well as to animal agriculture when dietary changes are recommended on the basis of unproven theories."

FBI director predicts no rioting despite rise in teenage crimes

ST. LOUIS (UPI) — FBI Director William H. Webster Wednesday predicted big cities would be free of riots this summer, despite what he said was a dramatic increase in teenage crime over the past decade.

The rate of violent crimes committed by teenagers has risen more than 60 percent in the past 10 years, Webster said. The rate of property crimes committed by teenagers has jumped 50 percent, he said.

People 16 years old are guilty of the largest number of property crimes, he said.

"Crime prevention has become a multi-billion-dollar business," Webster said in an address to the national conference of Big Brothers-Big Sisters of America.

But computer-age burglar alarms, sophisticated police training and other anti-crime efforts have done little to stem the jump in the rate of crimes by teenagers, he said, adding that the percentage of crimes solved has fallen.

He later told reporters his "general observations" lead him to believe most cities will be free of riots this summer despite near-record unemployment rates in some inner-city areas.

"I'm rather encouraged by what I see," he said. "There's plenty of room for people to express themselves lawfully."

Webster said big city police departments have learned from past mistakes in coping with rioters.

He told the conference that citizen crime-fighting groups may be the best deterrent to crime.

"The cooperation they engender is extremely important, particularly in times of economic distress," Webster said. "More people are saying they are sick of crime."

Webster said drugs are a major factor in crimes by teenagers.

"It is a tragic fact that there are people who will chain our young people to chemical dependency," he said.

The FBI and the Drug Enforcement Administration are beginning to cooperate in an effort to stem the flow of drugs into the United States, Webster said. An attempt will be made to prosecute public officials influenced by drug dealers, he said.

"When a sheriff in Georgia makes $9,000 a year and he is offered $50,000 or $100,000 to look the other way, the entire community had better examine how airtight its integrity is."

Nimmo's limo questioned

Veterans administrator under fire

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Veterans Administrator Robert Nimmo has repaid the government $6,411 improperly spent for a chauffeur, but Rep. Allen Ertel, D-Pa., said Wednesday he should be fired anyway for not knowing right from wrong.

"He obviously believes that he is innocent until caught," Ertel said in a statement.

Ertel had drafted a letter to be delivered to President Reagan saying that Nimmo should either resign or be fired for questionable expenditures.

A news conference to release the letter also had been scheduled before Nimmo announced late Tuesday that he had repaid the Veterans Administration $6,411 spent for the use of a chauffeur who drove him to work in apparent violation of a 1981 law.

Nimmo also said he will terminate a $708-a-month lease for a 1982 Buick Electra and seek "further internal protections" in future renovations of his office.

Ertel was ill Wednesday and could not attend his news conference, but an aide read a statement in which Ertel said none of Nimmo's "actions yesterday absolve Mr. Nimmo of his willful violation of the law."

"Paying back the government for his extravagances is not enough. I still plan to urge the president to fire Mr. Nimmo. He has violated the law and the public's trust. By pleading that he did not know he was doing anything wrong, one wonders if he knows what is right," Ertel's statement said.

Alibi helps 4-year-old beat littering rap

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — They tried to pin a littering rap on Daniel Becker, but the 4-year-old beat it by proving he was in the day care center at the time of the crime.

The defendant had put on his best clothes and had prepared his case carefully, complete with witnesses who would give him an alibi.

But Municipal Judge Gardner Colins didn't give little Daniel a chance, dismissing the charges against him.

The boy had been cited for dumping five bags of trash — all bigger than himself — outside, rather than inside, a city incinerator plant.

The citation was sent to the child after police found an envelope from the Sesame Street Book Club with the boy's name on it in one of the garbage bags.

Daniel's parents said he was in a child care center on the morning of Dec. 7, the day the trash was found.

Danger to preemies reduced

BOSTON (UPI) — Newborn care has improved so much over the last five years that premature infants suffering brain hemorrhaging are in little danger of death — provided they survive the first 24 hours, Johns Hopkins researchers said Wednesday.

Preterm babies also are in less danger from hydrocephalus, or water on the brain, caused by such bleeding, the researchers wrote in the New England Journal of Medicine.

They also may escape resulting brain damage and mental retardation, the team said.

Bleeding from small capillaries in the brain, although rare in full-term babies, occurs frequently in premature infants because the brain is not fully developed. Blood flowing into certain spaces normally containing fluids forces accumulation of fluids elsewhere, resulting in hydrocephalus.

"The report in literature even two years ago is that 50 percent of these (babies) died, and of those who survived the majority had significant handicaps," said Dr. Shlomo Shinnar, chief resident in pediatric neurology at Johns Hopkins. "The study was designed to see if we could find a treatment to improve that."

"We found out that the outcomes were so good, they really didn't need new therapies."

"Although the type of hemorrhages everybody is concerned about occur at the same frequency, babies don't die from them and most of them don't develop hydrocephalus," he said.

Of 115 babies under four pounds born at Johns Hopkins who survived the first 24 hours of life, 40 developed hemorrhaging — but only one required a shunt to drain the blood. Only six cases of hydrocephalus developed. Only eight of the babies died.

"How they do when they are school age remains to be seen," Shinnar said. "That is what we're studying now. Although we're far from finished, early results show a good chunk are normal."

Five years ago, 12 to 20 infants a year required shunts for hemorrhaging, Shinnar said.

Environmental warning issued

WASHINGTON (UPI) — More than a decade of nationwide environmental progress could be destroyed by President Reagan's natural resource policies, a conservation research group said Wednesday.

Making what was described as the first political statement in its 34-year history, The Conservation Foundation — sometimes referred to as the "Vatican of the U.S. environmental movement" due to its low-profile image — blasted the administration's "single-mindedness" on environmental questions.

The foundation raised the issue in a 400-page "State of the Environment 1982" report touching on nearly every current environmental topic, including acid rain, ground water pollution, hazardous wastes, soil erosion, wetlands, barrier islands and national parks.

Foundation President William Reilly said the group felt it was impossible to remain silent.

Watergate break-in set history in motion 10 years ago

By FRANK VAN RIPER
New York Daily News

Analysis

WASHINGTON — Sgt. Paul Leeper, a husky, crewcut plainclothes cop with wary eyes and a droopy moustache, got the call in his unmarked car at 1:52 a.m. on June 17, 1972.

The call was a handoff, since the uniform squad car that normally would have responded was getting gas and Leeper and his two colleagues were nearest. Besides, he would testify later, they needed the overtime.

The message was routine: a possible breaking and entering at the new office building near the Potomac called the Watergate, across the street from a Howard Johnson's Motor Lodge.

At the motel, Alfred C. Baldwin III stood on the balcony of his room, overlooking the street, holding a walkie-talkie.

When Baldwin, a former FBI agent, saw the lights go on in the 6th floor offices of the Democratic National Committee at the Watergate (Leeper and his men conducting their sweep), he radioed to his superior, E. Howard Hunt, an ex-CIA agent then on retainer to the White House who was waiting across the street in the Watergate Hotel.

"Are our people dressed in suits or dressed casually?" Baldwin asked, eyeing the casually dressed figures of the cops 50 yards away.

"What?" barked Hunt, obviously distressed.

"Are our people dressed in suits or dressed casually?" Baldwin repeated.

"Our people are dressed in suits," came the reply.

"Well, we've got problems," Baldwin said. "We've got some people dressed casually and they've got guns. They're looking around the balcony and everywhere but they haven't come across our people."

Hunt frantically tried to contact the five men in business suits and pale blue surgical gloves who were inside the Democratic National Committee offices, but to no avail. The man with the radio, one Bernard L. Barker, had turned his unit off to save the batteries.

Within minutes, as Hunt screamed into his radio and as Baldwin watched the drama unfold silently before him *across the street, the five natty bur*glars were arrested without a struggle by Leeper and his men — and events were set in motion that would topple a president of the United States and make the word Watergate synonomous with greatest political scandal in the nation's history.

There will be no formal ceremony to mark the 10th anniversary of the Watergate break-in today. Certainly, Richard M. Nixon, in Saddle River, N.J., won't be noting the date. "No, I never look back. I never look back," he said in a recent interview with CBS News.

But Watergate — the events that spawned it and the crimes that followed it — shook the faith of a nation and after two wrenching years, caused the first resignation from office of a U.S. president, and the ensuing decade has produced major changes in American politics.

The break-in itself seemed at first an amateurish affair, a case of political prankstérism gone too far. But it was quickly discovered to be far more than the "third-rate burglary attempt" that then-White House press secretary Ronald L. Ziegler dimissed. Watergate, it turned out, was only one of several federal crimes engineered by the Nixon White House.

Rather, it was pure political espionage aimed at gathering dirt on Democratic party officials from two illegal telephone bugs to be used during the Nixon reelection campaign.

The June 17 raid actually was the second break-in. The first, which took place the previous Memorial Day weekend, also was a fiasco. The wiretaps placed on the phones yielded nothing of value.

The scheme had been hatched five months earlier in the Justice Department office of Attorney General John N. Mitchell. There, a character named G. Gordon Liddy outlined a bizarre "intelligence" plan for an audience consisting of Mitchell, White House counsel John W. Dean III and Jeb Stuart Magruder, deputy director of the Committee for the Re-election of the President.

Liddy, who had been shuffled over to CREEP when a job could not be found for him at the Treasury Department, was anxious to please his superiors. He outlined a weird "intelligence" for the Republican campaign that included the proposed kidnapping of suspected radical demonstrators at the GOP National Convention and holding them incommunicado in the Southwest; wiretapping the Democrats at their headquarters in Washington and at their convention in Miami that summer; arranging for floating brothels on Biscayne Bay so that high-ranking Democratic delegates could be seduced by "high-class call girls" and later blackmailed. All this would cost a million dollars, Liddy said.

Mitchell, a stone-faced man, puffed on his pipe and listened to Liddy's performance in silence. "I should have thrown him out the window," he testified later. But he didn't. Instead, he told Liddy to come back with something less ambitious and expensive. When Liddy responded with a stripped-down, quarter-million-dollar scheme covering only one federal crime — illegal bugging — Mitchell gave the go-ahead with barely an afterthought.

That action, and Mitchell's subsequent attempts to cover it up, would buy the attorney general 19 months in jail for perjury and conspiracy to obstruct justice.

To this day, no one has linked Richard Nixon with the actual planning of the Watergate break-in. But his role in attempting to cover up administration complicity is beyond dispute, contained in the secret tape recordings he had ordered made of his private White House conversations.

Of course, if Nixon knew nothing of the break-in, why did he have to cover up? The answer to that question emerged bit by bit during two major congressional investigations and a dogged pursuit by the news media, and when it did, the reasoning was simple — Nixon covered up because he had to.

The central figure was E. Howard Hunt, the ex-CIA man who was then working for Nixon's political hatchetman in the White House, Charles Colson. When he was finally arrested for his part in the burglary, Hunt quickly passed the word that he would blow the whistle on other "seamy" activities if his hush money demands were not met. And when the pressure mounted, Nixon himself declared that paying off Hunt was "the prime thing you damn well better get done."

Nixon himself, in the damning White House tape transcripts, provided the best evidence of his own willingness to obstruct justice:

"I want you all to stonewall it," he said. "Let them plead the Fifth Amendment, coverup or anything else, if it'll save it — save the plan. That's the whole point."

Sirica: What if they got away with it?

WASHINGTON (UPI) — U.S. District Judge John J. Sirica says he does not believe there is evidence Richard Nixon knew in advance about the Watergate burglary that occurred 10 years ago today. But he believes Nixon should have been brought to trial.

Sirica, 78 and an active senior judge still handling 30 to 60 civil cases a year, shared his recollections about Watergate with United Press International in a 90-minute interview in his chambers.

There are President Dwight D. Eisenhower's commission nominating him as a judge 25 years ago; the March 23, 1973, letter from Watergate burglar James McCord alleging a cover-up; and Nixon's July 25, 1974, letter refusing to turn over White House tapes.

But the barber's son who grew up in Washington in tough times remains untouched by the glory, and is still one of the most friendly, most gentle, most pretentious men in a city that revels on power and the flaunting of it.

From the fall of 1972, when the four Cuban burglars were indicted, until the fall of 1977, when he reduced the conspiracy sentences of John Mitchell, H.R. Haldeman and John Ehrlichman, Sirica presided over most Watergate proceedings.

It was arrogance that got these people into trouble — arrogance, and lust for power," he said.

"The people of this country are forgiving people. We can forgive almost anything. But when they learn their president — the lying, the cover-up, misusing contributors' money — this was a pretty serious thing. People cannot forgive lying.

"That's what brought them down — lying."

Did you ever stop to think what would have happened to our country if they had gotten away with it?" answering his own question, Sirica pointed out that before Watergate there were weak campaign finance laws and said: "If they got away with this burglary without getting caught, they would have control on raising all the money and the political party that could raise enough money could buy the election."

Scandal spurred several reforms

WASHINGTON (UPI) — In the 10 years since the Watergate break-in June 17, 1972, Congress has approved several measures to ensure honest elections and open governmental operations to public view.

Common Cause, a civil and consumer rights protection group headed by former Watergate special prosecutor Archibald Cox, has issued a summary of some of the most significant reforms that have resulted — directly or indirectly — from the events of the Watergate era. Here is a synopsis of those reforms as outlined by Common Cause.

•The Federal Election Campaign Act Amendments of 1974 were enacted to alter the 1971 act of the same name, which required campaign committees disclose amounts of their expenditures and contributions accepted. The 1974 amendments established limitations on how much money could be donated by individuals or political committees to candidates for public office.

•The Amendments to the Presidential Campaign Fund Act, 1973, were attached to a 1971 act that called for the addition of the $1 campaign contribution option on federal income tax forms 1040 and 1040A. This was to start in 1973, with each taxpayer having the option of stating whether his dollar donation would go to the Democratic or Republican presidential candidate. However, in light of revelations stemming from Watergate, Congress revised the act to establish a single fund into which all donations are deposited, and from which both candidates draw campaign funds.

•The Federal Election Campaign Act Amendments of 1976 gave the Senate veto power over FEC decisions and established restrictions on fund-raising abilities of political committees affiliated with labor unions or corporations.

•The House and Senate Codes of Conduct, enacted in 1977, prohibits members of Congress from accepting gifts totaling more than $100 during any given calendar year from lobbyists or foreign nationals. The codes also state senators and House members may not earn monies from outside work totaling more than 15 percent of their annual salaries, and that honoraria — payments for speeches or published articles — may not exceed $2,000 per article or speech.

•The Ethics in Goverment Act of 1978 requires submission of annual public financial disclosure statements by senators, House members and their top-level employees, high-ranking congressional and executive officers, and federal judges. These must show all income and holdings, carried or unearned. The law simultaneously established the Office of Government Ethics, responsible for enforcing the disclosure law. Also, because of the so-called "revolving door" through which some former federal employees have, upon leaving the government, gone to work in industries over which they had had regulatory power, the act established restrictions on business activities of such people.

•The Freedom of Information Act, enacted in 1966, was strengthened by a series of amendments in 1974. The purpose of the act is to ensure citizens have access to records to all government agencies, with certain exceptions. The 1974 amendments call for a time limit for official response to FOI requests, and for judicial review of any refusals.

•The Government in the Sunshine Act, passed in 1976, requires all meetings of multi-member government agencies be open to the public. Meetings that involve matters of national security or certain other sensitive subjects are exempt.

Resulting, in part, from suspected improprities by the FBI regarding Watergate, Congress established a maximum 10-year term of office for the FBI director.

Cuba nearly doubles military might in year

UNITED NATIONS (UPI) — Cuban Vice President Carlos Rafael Rodriguez told the General Assembly Wednesday Cuba had "almost doubled" its military capability in the past year.

Cuba received huge amounts of modern and sophisticated Soviet weapons.

He declared the buildup was forced on Cuba because of attacks by successive U.S. administrations.

Rodriguez avoided naming the Soviet Union as the arms supplier or describing the weapons shipped to his country.

He said Cuba added half a million men and women to the part-time territorial militia.

The Soviet Union has consistently been supplying arms to the Communist island nation of President Fidel Castro.

The Cuban vice president admitted while Havana called for worldwide reduction in armaments, the massive Cuban arms might sound incongruous.

"Yes, in the past few months Cuba received what we might term huge quantities of modern and sophisticated weapons," Rodriguez said.

The Cuban disclosure of the arms buildup followed a pledge by the Soviet Union Tuesday that it would never be the first nation to use nuclear weapons.

Rodriguez asked "why have we strengthened our military capability, almost doubling it in one year?

Admitting the build up "contrasts with our words," he answered it was "a question of defensive activity that cannot be put off."

The Cuban leader said the experience of the Falkland Islands and of Lebanon demonstrated that criticism of small countries for contributing to the arms race by the purchase of sophisticated weaponry was misplaced.

"To arm oneself in order to attack one's neighbors is reprehensible; to arms oneself in order to exercise self-defense is necessary against the philosphy of plunder," Rodriguez said.

He angrily denounced the United States for its support of Britain and Israel for their "aggression" in the South Atlantic and the Middle East.

"A brutal and criminal war was imposed on two peoples who have had to confront the enormous military superiority with which they were attacked by the forces of colonialism and aggression that in both cases had the United States as an efficient ally and supplier of scientific technology," Rodriguez said.

The United States "turned its back on its continental duty" in order to help Britain "crush the resistance of the Argentines struggling for their dignity and their land."

This "philosophy of plunder" was also found in the Middle East, Rodriguez said, where a strategic alliance between the United States and Israel allowed the unspeakable invasion of Lebanon."

Seychelles mercenaries on trial for their lives

VICTORIA, Seychelles (UPI) — Seven mercenaries went on trial Wednesday for a bungled attempted coup against President Albert Rene's government that could cost them their lives.

The defendants, six men and a woman, pleaded they not be charged with treason, a crime that carries the death penalty.

The wife of one of the mercenaries, Di Brookes, broke through the police escort and clutched her husband in a warm embrace as he was led inside the tiny courtroom of the people's assembly.

Heavily armed soldiers ringed the white stone building and kept at bay islanders straining to peep at the seven foreigners as Chief Justice Earl Seaton began the proceedings.

The seven are South Africans Martin Dolinchek, Jerry Puren, and Robert Sims; Zimbabwean Aubrey Brookes and Britons Susan Ingles, Roger England and Bernard Carey.

The prosecutor accused all seven of treason and illegal import of weapons in connection with the attempt last Nov. 25 to overthrow the government in this tiny group of 92 coral outcrops 1,300 miles off the coast of East Africa.

Vietnam challenged to accept settlement

SINGAPORE (UPI) — U.S. allies in Southeast Asia closed their annual ministerial meeting Wednesday with a challenge to Vietnam to accept a peaceful political settlement in Cambodia.

"The continued Vietnamese military occupation of Kampuchea (Cambodia) constitutes a serious threat to peace and stability in the whole southeast Asian region," said the Association of Southeast Asian Nations, ASEAN.

After three days of talks, the foreign ministers of Thailand, Malaysia, Indonesia, the Philippines and Singapore demanded the total withdrawal of Vietnamese troops from Cambodia followed by U.N.-supervised elections.

Three ASEAN countries — Singapore, Indonesia and Malaysia — said they were making arrangements to receive Vietnamese Foreign Minister Nguyen Co Thach.

"We look forward to a positive response from Vietnam" during Thach's visits, said Indonesian Foreign Minister Mochtar Kusumaatmaja.

Thai Foreign Minister Siddhi Savetsila said Vietnam must make the first move to end the conflict that has burdened the region with hundreds of thousands of refugees.

Japanese company announces wristwatch television set

TOKYO (UPI) — Shades of Dick Tracy — the Japanese now have developed a wristwatch TV set.

Along with giving the time and the latest soap opera, the watch also offers FM radio, a calender, an alarm and a stopwatch.

Suwa Seiko Co. said the 1.2-inch television uses liquid crystal instead of a picture tube.

Seiko Executive Director Hideaki Yasukawa said the price has yet to be fixed but will run around $400. He said the watch would go on the market early next year.

The TV watch is almost two inches long about an inch and a half wide and about a third of an inch thick.

The battery-powered receiver slips into a pocket and accompanying headphones pick up the audio to match the black-and-white picture, Yasukawa said.

Road work

Construction redirects traffic

TWIN FALLS — One Twin Falls street-improvement project shifted into full throttle this week, while work on another ended.

The demolition of part of the west side of Blue Lakes Boulevard North is under way, and with it came the rechanneling of traffic.

Left turns onto Filer Avenue from Blue Lakes Boulevard North have been eliminated for six to seven weeks, says Doyle Matkin of Bannock Paving Co., the Pocatello firm that is widening the street.

Northbound and southbound traffic was confined to the east side of the road, from the Perrine Coulee to the Burger King restaurant, as of Tuesday, so that construction can proceed on the west side. Construction on the east side of the road is expected to begin in mid-August, he said.

Matkin discussed the progress of the project at his regularly scheduled meeting Tuesday with Blue Lakes merchants. There are no plans to block the entrances to their businesses during construction, he told the merchants.

Meanwhile, crews across town were busy Tuesday painting stripes on new pavement at the intersection of Elizabeth Boulevard and Eastland Drive, where a $51,000 improvement project was begun in November.

The project included adding 12 feet to the west side of the intersection to allow a new right-turn lane for southbound traffic. Part of the contract, awarded to PMF Inc. of Twin Falls, also involved the installation of curbs, gutters and sidewalks, and the extensive realignment and improvement of the irrigation system by the road.

The city's engineer says that prior to the start of the 1982-83 school year, crosswalks will be painted at the intersection, which is part of a major pedestrian route for students at O'Leary Junior High School.

Waters rise in Big Wood River area

HAILEY — The Big Wood River was on the rise again Wednesday, as warm temperatures continued to melt the mountains' sizable snowpack.

Officials at the National Weather Service office in Boise said the Big Wood reached 6.38 feet on the gauge Wednesday, and was expected to rise to near the 6.5-foot flood stage today and Friday.

However, a spokesman said the river's flow is not expected to top the seven-foot mark reached during a warm spell several weeks ago.

The Blaine County sheriff's office reported no significant problems by Wednesday afternoon. The area's residents have been prepared for flooding for the past four weeks.

Confined in a body cast, Kristin Muchow scoots around her home on a "tummy cart" made by her father. Surgery has repaired her malformed hip.

A leg to stand on

Modern medical 'miracle' helps young girl overcome congenital hip deformity

By STEPHANIE SCHOROW
Times-News writer

GOODING — Three-and-a-half-year-old Kristin Muchow already has tested the limits of her supposedly immobilized body.

With both legs and part of her small torso encased in a fiberglass cast, she's learned how to roll over, stand and even take a few steps while leaning on a couch or table.

Laying on her "tummy cart" and using her arms and one foot, she zips around the living room, blonde hair carelessly falling over her blue eyes.

A more mobile "immobilized" person would be hard to find.

Put away the tearful violins and handkerchiefs. This just isn't another sob story about a crippled child. It's a tale of modern medicine.

Born with a malformed hip, Kristin has benfitted from new surgical techniques to reform her left hip joint. For at least another three weeks, she will remain in a cast that keeps her legs rigid in a wide "froggie" position, anchored with a stick that runs from one leg to another.

But she is destined for a normal life, thanks to recent innovations in orthopedic surgery. And thanks to the Shriners Hospital for Crippled Children in Salt Lake City, her family has not been laid destitute by huge medical bills – often the corollary to such severe medical problems.

That is not to say that trauma has been banished from the lives of Craig and Pat Muchow and their two other children, Scott, 12, and Ryan, 5. They have had to help their lively daughter through painful surgery and an awkward recovery, while heeding the needs of their two boys.

Mr. and Mrs. Muchow first discovered Kristin's problem about two-and-a-half years ago, when they noticed she wasn't walking the way her brothers did. They soon realized that her left leg was shorter than her right. Craig measured her legs and found one a chilling two inches shorter.

Doctors soon confirmed that the little girl had a condition known as "congenital hip dislocation" in which the socket of the hip joint is unformed. The top of the femur (the upper leg bone), or the "ball" of the socket, lacks contact with the hip joint and does not grow properly. An estimated 1 percent of the white female population suffers from some degree of the condition, according to the Muchows. Its cause remains unknown.

Without corrective measures, Kristin's leg would have been significantly shorter than her other one, leaving her severely handicapped.

A local doctor referred the couple to Dr. Sherman Coleman of Salt Lake City, who specializes in treating such cases. The Muchows said they later discovered Coleman was nationally known for his orthopedic work.

Through the sponsorship of a Wendell Shriner, Joe Kalimes Jr., Kristin was admitted to the Shriners hospital.

She underwent a rigorous series of procedures, leading up to an operation in May. First, she went into traction for two weeks. Twenty-pound weights were strapped to her legs to loosen her muscles.

Her femur was then "popped" into the proper position. Once contact with the socket was made, Kristin had a 50-50 chance that her hip joint would form correctly without further measures.

She spent three months in a body cast and then another month in a metal and foam, diaper-like contraption called a "craig splint." Even in the rigid cast, she started to walk, moving herself like a box — first one side, then the other.

"If you don't think she looked funny," Craig Muchow says, laughing at the memory of her short and determined strides.

Then, for a year, she was free of all incumbrances. She walked, ran and danced like a normal girl.

But the socket still was not forming properly, and the Muchows had to prepare her for another operation.

In a procedure pioneered by Coleman, called a "Pemberton ostiotomy," a section of bone from another part of her body was grafted to her hip to form a socket. Thirteen doctors from New Zealand, England, Australia, France, Mexico and other countries watched the operation, on invitation from Coleman.

Kristin will be in a cast for three to six more weeks to ensure that her hip heals properly. But thinking of the X-rays taken after the operation, Craig says with pleasure, "It's a real good hip."

Adjustment to another cast has been difficult, far more difficult, the Muchows found, than the pain of the operation.

Pat says the little girl has had nightmares about falling and about dying. Anger and frustration have welled up inside her, and she took it out on her parents, until a timely Miss Piggy puppet took the brunt of her feelings.

She was fearful to go home, thinking her cast was ugly. Patiently, the Muchows have worked with her to calm her fears.

"We talk about her pretty cast and how well she's going to dance. She loves to dance," Pat says. "Now she says, 'See my pretty cast.'"

The Muchows also express pleasure at the Shriners hospital, praising the camaraderie and professionalism of the staff, and the spirit of the children.

"I've never seen a group of youngsters more strong-willed and determined to get better," Craig says.

But without assistance, they might have been forced to sell their farm to pay the doctor bills that Craig estimates have risen to $30,000.

"We'd be out on the streets," he says. "If it wasn't for an organization like the Shriners and Crippled Children of Idaho (who also have helped the family), there'd be an awful lot of crippled children running around."

Give-away car draws complaint, so dealer offers another

By STEVE LIPSON
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — It was neither the best of cars nor the worst of cars.

But the misjudgment and misunderstandings surrounding this car — one of 10 used cars that Twin Falls auto dealers gave away during a promotion last weekend — created a furor that engulfed the woman who won it, her family, the car dealer giving her the car, several other Twin Falls auto dealers and, last but not least, this reporter, who helped mediate the dispute while working on this story.

When Joy Elman's name was drawn to receive a used car from Chris Jordan Volkswagen, she was thrilled by her good fortune. The 18-year-old, who was married two weeks ago, said she needed a car to get to work. This would be her first car.

But Monday, soon after she picked up her 1969 Opel Kadett, which she had not seen until that time, she began to wish she had never won.

"We didn't expect anything. Just an older car that ran," she said.

Yet even with modest expectations, she was disappointed.

"You have to plug your nose to sit in it," she said.

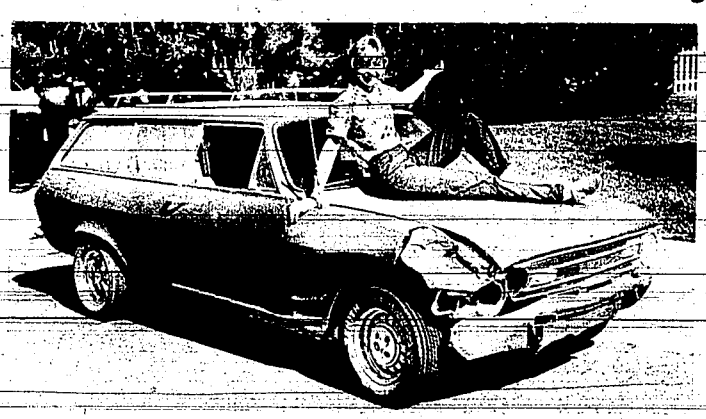
Wednesday, there were fresh pools of oil and water underneath where the car had been parked for the night. Assorted rodeo bumper stickers formed crude patches for the torn material covering the ceiling.

More importantly, if the car is ever to serve as basic transportation, it is missing a headlight, the front bumper and a turn signal. Elman could get a traffic ticket for driving the car as it now sits.

Also, Elman, her father, her husband and the auto dealer each had trouble shifting into one or more of the car's gears during test drives, although this reporter, who later tried driving the car, did not.

On the other hand, the raucous-sounding engine does work, and the wide-track tires are in good condition.

When he first saw the car his daughter won, Ralph Milton was upset that she had been allowed to drive in such a "road hazard." He went back with her to Chris Jordan Volkswagen to complain.



SUSAN POLLARD/Times-News

Joy Elman displays the car she won from Chris Jordan Volkswagen at last week's car show

In a less-than-diplomatic style, befitting a man who spent 22 years as a U.S. Marine, Milton told Jordan that the transmission and clutch should be fixed, and the headlight and bumper replaced.

Jordan, who is not particularly diplomatic himself when pushed, told this reporter later that the car was "junk" and "a bucket of bolts." But the financial realities of his relatively small dealership, which he purchased less than a year ago, limited what he could do for Elman, he said.

When the car dealers decided a little more than a week before their promotion that each of them would give away a used car, Jordan said he did not have a suitable one on his lot. His standard business practice, because his dealership is small, is to sell any car that he cannot sell retail for at least $500, at wholesale cost to other dealers.

He had to buy a car specifically to give away, and it was not easy to find one, he said.

Jordan would not say how much he paid for the Opel. "If I said I paid $500 for it, that was a bad deal. If I paid $100, it still wasn't a very good deal."

Hoping to settle the dispute over the give-away car, Jordan made an offer to Elman and her father. But he did not explain it clearly, or they were too angry to understand, because they felt Jordan made an arrogant, take-it-or-leave-it offer.

Jordan said he would take back the Opel and let them have a different car as soon as he got a suitable one. However, they felt he was warning that any car he would be willing to give them would have equally serious flaws.

Wednesday, Jordan explained his offer to this reporter, who relayed it to Elman, who appeared ready to accept the offer as it was explained by a neutral party.

Whenever Jordan gets a used car that he normally would dispose of wholesale, he will offer it to Elman. For as long as she cares to wait before choosing one, she can examine all such cars as they come in, Jordan said.

Usually, he can expect to get several in a month. And the odds are good, he said, that one will be in better shape than the Opel.

But some others in the auto business are critical of the way Jordan handled the situation.

The car dealers staged the three-day, group sale at the Twin Falls High School football stadium last Friday through Sunday. As part of the effort to draw crowds to the sale, each dealer pledged to give away a used car. Ads for the sale said "10 really nice" used cars would be given away.

Dealers said nothing was done to guarantee the quality of the donated used cars because common sens. .d to dictate that no one would pick a car that would embarrass his business.

A few dealers were proud enough of the cars they planned to give away that they displayed them at their lots during the week before the sale. One used-car manager picked a car from his lot carrying a $995 sticker price to give away. Realistically, he said, it could have sold for $800.

6-year-old Declo girl hit by car

DECLO — A 6-year-old Declo girl was hospitalized after a car hit her Wednesday morning, according to a Cassia County sheriff's deputy.

Mindy Osterhout was reported in stable condition Wednesday evening in Cassia Memorial Hospital. According to the deputy, she was hit at Highway 81 and Highway 77 in Declo about 10:50 a.m.

Thomas Teeter of Malta was driving west on 81, when he slowed down at the intersection. Another vehicle was just leaving the intersection on 77 as three children entered the intersection, the deputy said. Two unidentified children accompanying the Osterhout girl apparently spotted Teeter's vehicle and stopped. However, Mindy kept walking. Teeter, who was traveling about 10 mph, could not stop the vehicle in time to avoid hitting the child, the deputy said.

No citations have been issued against Teeter.

Man injured in auto wreck dies

TWIN FALLS — An 83-year-old Gooding man, injured last week in a two-car collision north of Twin Falls, died Wednesday at St. Alphonsus Hospital in Boise.

John Vernon Bumgarner sustained injuries Friday when a car, driven by his wife, Neva Bumgarner, collided with a southbound car at the U.S. 93 and I-84 interchange.

Idaho State Police said the collision occurred when Bumgarner's northbound car attempted a left turn in front of a car driven by Four Scott of Studio City, Calif.

All three individuals were transported to Magic Valley Memorial Hospital in Twin Falls. Scott was treated and released.

John Bumgarner subsequently was transferred to the Boise hospital. His wife was released Saturday from Magic Valley Memorial.

Bumgarner's obituary appears elsewhere on this page.

Rotary confab opens today

TWIN FALLS — A world record for potato peeling may fall when Idaho Rotary Club members gather in Twin Falls, beginning today, for their district convention.

About 400 to 600 people are scheduled to attend the annual event, which has not been held in Twin Falls for almost 20 years. Rotary clubs from throughout Idaho, except the panhandle region, and Ontario, Ore., are included in this district.

The first event of the conference, which begins today and continues through Saturday, will be an assault on the world potato-peeling record. The current record, established in England about a year ago, is 425 pounds, peeled in 45 minutes by a five-man team using ordinary kitchen knives.

The record attempt will begin at 4 p.m., by the pool at the Canyon Springs Inn.

Other events during the district conference include a luncheon speech Friday by Bob Saxvik, an Idaho member of the Northwest Power Council; a speech Saturday by A. Grant Holman, a vice president of the Federal Reserve Bank of Salt Lake City; and awards to the Rotary clubs, including the Jerome club, that organized the best community-service projects during the previous year.

Condition of stabbing victim improving

TWIN FALLS — A Twin Falls man who was stabbed Tuesday with a butcher knife showed signs of improvement Wednesday, said a spokesman at Magic Valley Memorial Hospital.

Hospital officials upgraded 18-year-old Billy Reeves' condition to serious. He had been listed in critical condition Tuesday.

Reeves, who was stabbed once in the upper back, telephoned Twin Falls police for help at 4:30 a.m. Tuesday from a telephone booth at Harmon Park.

About two hours later, police arrested 25-year-old Larry John Jones of 1828 Kimberly Road, Twin Falls, and charged him with assault with a deadly weapon with intent to commit murder.

Jones remained in the county jail Wednesday in lieu of $200,000 bond, according to county sheriff's deputies.

Hospital administrator injured by mower

TWIN FALLS — The administrator of Magic Valley Memorial Hospital has become a patient in the hospital.

William Burns was injured in an accident with a lawnmower outside his Twin Falls house Tuesday evening. He underwent surgery on his left foot, which was mangled by the mower, and he expects to remain in the hospital through the week.

Interviewed Wednesday morning, Burns said one of his toes nearly was severed and was re-attached in surgery. This Tuesday, he had been mowing grass near a ditch bank, fell and his foot was caught in the mower.

Yet he worried that some dealers might use the promotion to rid themselves of a piece of junk. "I kept thinking, I hope some of these clowns don't do that."

At Roy Raymond Ford, almost $250 was spent to put a 1966 Falcon in shape as the give-away car. Detail paint was added. All safety features on the car were inspected. Four new brakes and a new seat cover were installed, Roy Raymond said.

He was upset that this reporter would pay attention to Jordan. Raymond and most of the eight other Twin Falls car dealers made an effort to award good used cars, and the sales event was a success. Yet media attention on Jordan would reflect badly on all dealers, Raymond said.

Jordan, too, regretted the attention. "I never really thought I'd get in trouble giving away a car," he said.

Man pleads guilty to charge

JEROME — Manuel Gallegos of Jerome entered a guilty plea Wednesday in Fifth District Court in Jerome to a charge of possession of stolen property.

He was sentenced to serve a year in the Jerome County Jail.

Gallegos was charged in March with the possession of several items stolen from the Raymond Jones home, including a clock, jewelry box and jewelry. He also was charged with forgery, involving a $177 check.

In accepting the guilty plea on the first count, District Judge Theron W. Ward dismissed the forgery charge.

He sentenced Gallegos to 14 years in the state penitentiary and then commuted the sentence to one year in the county jail, with credit for time served prior to sentencing.

Teens charged in burglaries

JEROME — Three Jerome juveniles were awaiting court action Wednesday after being arrested by city police on two counts of first-degree burglary.

Police Chief Darryl Cameron said the youths, ages 16 and 17, were observed by an officer in the vicinity of the Voice Inc. building, 515 Main St., about 11 p.m. Sunday.

The officer was checking a vehicle parked near the building, Cameron said, when he apparently surprised the three youths and they ran in separate directions. The officer called for assistance, and two other officers joined the chase.

Cameron said the vehicle the juveniles left parked near the building contained items allegedly stolen in two recent car burglaries.

Council authorizes water rationing for irrigation of lawns

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer

JEROME — The residents of Jerome will be on an alternating irrigation schedule by July 1 — or before.

Lanny Sloan, the city's public-works director, told City Council on Tuesday night that water use is beginning to catch up with production.

He said that he was planning to ask council to approve an odd- and even-number plan for lawn sprinkling when the metering equipment on the 10th Avenue pumping station failed Tuesday evening.

Sloan said it will be necessary to shut the well off and tear the pump down to determine the extent of the problem. Then, city crews will have to manually control the pump until repairs can be made, and that could compound the problem of meeting water demands.

"Last night, at about 11 p.m., the city was using 2,000 gallons of water per minute. This is a strain on the supply," he said.

Council gave Sloan permission to put the alternating system into effect when necessary, but no later than July 1.

Persons whose homes have even house numbers will be asked to water their lawns on even-numbered days, and those with odd numbers, on odd-numbered days.

Jerome has applied for a federal community block grant to expand and upgrade the city's water system. A decision on the grant should be announced later this summer.

In other action at Tuesday's council meeting:

• Jerome residents may face increasing costs for trash and garbage collection.

Les Reitz, representing Parks and Son Intermountain Inc., told council that his firm is seeking a 12 percent rate increase to meet costs for labor, equipment maintenance and other expenses. He said fees have not increased since February 1981.

Council members indicated that they felt 12 percent was too much of an increase in view of the current economic conditions in the community. A special meeting will be held with the merchants to get the feeling of business users before council acts on the request.

• Police Chief Darryl Cameron presented a report on a study of the most hazardous intersections in Jerome, as determined by frequency of accidents. He said his department is considering additional stop signs or other safety measures at those intersections.

Prosecutor refutes criticism about his secretaries' work

Says commissioner's statements politically motivated

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer

JEROME — Recent demands by the Jerome County commissioners that the prosecutor's secretaries work full time in the Courthouse carry some political overtones, William Dalling, the Jerome County prosecutor, said this week.

A week ago, commission Chairman Mel Grindstaff charged that at least one of the two secretaries in the prosecutor's office was working in the prosecutor's private law office much of the time.

Grindstaff said that since the county pays for two secretaries for the prosecutor, he wanted them in the prosecutor's Courthouse office full time.

Dalling does not deny that the secretaries have worked in his own office, but he says the commissioners, and probably the public, fail to understand the whole situation.

"The commissioners have known for a long time this is the way I have worked, and they knew previous prosecutors worked the same way."

He says he believes that Grindstaff, a Democrat who is seeking re-election, is attempting to make political gains by accusing him of getting something for nothing at the expense of the taxpayers.

But Grindstaff said Wednesday that there is nothing political in his request.

"We (the county taxpayers) are paying for two full-time secretaries and only getting full-time services from one," he said.

However, Dalling, a Republican, claims the taxpayers are getting a bargain in the prosecutor's office.

"I am a part-time prosecutor, but I spend about 90 percent of my time on county work. I am on call at all times, including nights and weekends, to handle county arrests and other legal needs."

Dalling says he frequently has had one of the two county secretaries working in his private law office. But they work on county business while they are there, he says, in addition to answering telephones and keeping his office open.

Since the commissioners issued their criticism a week ago, Dalling says he has kept both secretaries in the Courthouse office, and he has been spending most of his time there as well.

The prosecutor says he hopes the problem can be resolved with a full understanding of the situation on the part of the commissioners, himself and the public.

Herd district battle is back to 'point one'

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer

JEROME — Nine months of effort to remove public lands from the herd district in the east end of Jerome County went back to "square one" Monday.

Jerome County Prosecutor William Dalling told the county commissioners that he has researched the matter, and in talks with the state Attorney General's Office, "they agree with my assessment of the law that was adopted in about 1963, (which excludes) public lands from herd districts."

But, he said, "it would appear the law is not retroactive to districts formed before that time. Apparently, the district in Jerome County was formed in about 1922, and at that time, it included both open range and farmlands."

H.E. "Hap" Wilson, a member of the Jerome Highway District, had asked that the open range be removed from the herd district to clear up questions of liability for cattle that are hit on county roads that run through the district.

Within herd districts, farmers must fence their property to restrict the movement of livestock. Open range is not fenced, except for cases where landowners want to keep livestock out, not in. Otherwise, the livestock is allowed to roam free.

If a cow and car collide in an open-range area, the motorist normally is responsible. But including open range in a herd district could change the liability, Wilson said.

Normally, the rancher becomes responsible for an accident in herd-district areas where the movement of livestock is restricted by fences, but the highway district also is held legally responsible if the accident occurs in such a district on a county road.

The county commissioners and highway board members had hoped to find a legal means of simply removing the open range from the district, since the 1963 code revision says herd districts shall not include open range.

Commissioner Russell Howell Jr. said Dalling's opinion is different than what commissioners were led to believe after conferring with officials at the Bureau of Land Management. He suggested another contact with BLM officials to see if they can suggest an easier method of removing the public lands from the herd district.

Otherwise, the commissioners told Wilson, it will be necessary to follow the provisions of the law for changing the boundaries of herd districts. That would require signatures from a majority of all of the landowners in the district and would take considerable time.

"Well, we started from scratch before," Wilson said. "I guess we can start over again."

Dalling suggested researching the 1922 records of the formation of the district. If it was not set up according to legal specifications at that time, he said it might be possible to declare the 60-year-old district boundaries illegal and in that way, remove the open range.

Kramer declares for vacancy on Supreme Court

By MARTY TRILLHAASE
Times-News writer

HAILEY — Judge Douglas Kramer of Hailey has announced that he will seek the Idaho Supreme Court vacancy created by the recent retirement announcement of Justice Joseph McFadden.

Kramer, 57, made the announcement Tuesday, exactly one month before the application deadline, set by the Idaho Judicial Council, lapses. The judicial council, which will nominate candidates for the position to Gov. John Evans, tentatively has scheduled interviews with candidates for August.

McFadden, 66, was appointed to the court in 1959 by then-Gov. Robert Smylie. Prior to his appointment, McFadden practiced law in Hailey, serving as Blaine County prosecutor from 1947 until 1959.

McFadden's tie to the Magic Valley region underscores a part of Kramer's bid for the office.

"The Magic Valley and the Wood River Valley have always had a representative on the Supreme Court, and that custom should continue," Kramer said in his statement.

Questioned later, the former Twin Falls lawyer conceded it may be "provincial to say you believe it's important, but I do believe that this state is so varied in its interests, that it is important to have geographical representation on the court."

Traditionally, Supreme Court justices have represented regions of the state. However, in recent years, that tradition has given way to a Supreme Court dominated by Boise-area members. Three of the five justices worked in Boise at the time they began their Supreme Court careers; a fourth came from north Idaho.

Kramer, who has served as a district court judge since 1974, was elected to a four-year term in May. He serves as the administrative judge for the Fifth Judicial District, which consists of the eight-county Magic Valley region.

Forecast for weather station is still 'cloudy'

TWIN FALLS — Despite assurances that one Idaho weather service station will remain open, the fate of the National Weather Service station at Kimberly remains uncertain.

This week, U.S. Commerce Department officials announced that the Lewiston office of the National Weather Service will remain open indefinitely. The office was scheduled to close Sunday.

But that announcement holds no impact for the Kimberly weather service, which is one of 45 weather stations operated by the U.S. Department of Agriculture. All 45 stations have been placed on the chopping block by the Reagan administration's proposed budget cuts.

"We're still on the list," says Bill Galkin of the Kimberly station. "We have not received any word whatsoever contradicting the last statement."

If the Kimberly weather station is closed, area farmers would have to rely on National Weather Service stations in Pocatello or Boise. But those stations provide information for the public, and farmers would have to interpret that data to meet their own needs.

Reagan's proposals are just that, however, and Congress would have to act before the weather station would close. But Congress has made no decision to cut the weather-service stations.

Moreover, Congress, which is slated to begin considering appropriation bills later this summer, may not support the administration's proposed cut, says a spokesman for Sen. James McClure, R-Idaho.

"Congress has always supported those stations very much in the past, and there's not very much difference in that support now," said Tod Neuenschwander, McClure's press secretary.

Proposed hydroelectric plant called unfeasible

TWIN FALLS — An engineering firm has been selected to conduct a feasibility study of the Milner hydroelectric project, but a second joint venture between the Idaho Power Co. and the Twin Falls Canal Co. may be scrapped.

Idaho Power spokesman Larry Taylor said a consultant's report on the Low Line Canal project indicates power from that site would cost 12 cents a kilowatt-hour, making it economically unfeasible.

Idaho Power officials plan to meet with the canal company to see if modifications might make the project more feasible, Taylor said.

Last year, the Twin Falls Canal Co. received a Federal Energy Regulatory Commission license exemption for the Low Line project. Construction was to begin this fall.

The Milner study, required by the FERC prior to licensing, will be funded jointly by Idaho Power and the canal company.

Three other entities also applied to the FERC to build plants using the water that flows over Milner Dam. One of the applicants, Howard Bailey, has appealed the commission's decision to award the preliminary permit to the canal company.

John Rosholt, the canal company's attorney, said a thorough look at three sites will be included in the study. One of the sites is near Point Spill, north of Murtaugh.

Bailey and one other applicant named sites near Point Spill, which has a 400-foot drop but would require the use of a portion of the company's canals to convey water during the irrigation off-season.

The canal company originally opposed the Point Spill site, citing problems that included winter icing on canal gates. However, Rosholt said the company since has acquired an option on land near Point Spill, and it will consider the site carefully during the FERC study.

Hansen street renovation begins soon

HANSEN — The last phase of a three-year rehabilitation project in Hansen will begin in the next 10 days, according to Darlene Miller, the city clerk.

Renovation of city streets, the third and final phase of a three-year federal Housing and Urban Development-funded project, will begin "by the first of next week," she said.

The first two phases of the block grant, awarded to the city in 1979, were used for land acquisition and housing rehabilitation, and for a new waste-water treatment facility.

County revokes bus ticket

Additional facts keep officials from being taken for a ride

JEROME — The Jerome County commissioners decided they may have been a little too kind-hearted and hasty in a decision they made Monday.

Early Monday, they granted a Jerome County woman $200 for a one-way bus ticket to Missouri for her husband.

The woman told the commissioners that her husband was mentally ill, but that his family in Missouri had agreed to take care of him.

She said she had paid a $2,800 medical and hospital bill by sending in $20 a week from her salary, while supporting herself and six children, and she offered to pay the cost of the bus ticket back in the same way. The commissioners praised her for her responsible attitude.

There was only one drawback with the one-way ticket — the commissioners found out later in the day that the woman's husband was in the county jail and not free to travel.

They immediately canceled the $200 ticket.

Hailey delays call for bond issue, killing possibility of work this fall

HAILEY — The construction of a proposed water system in Hailey likely will not begin before next spring, council learned this week.

Mayor Wordell Rainey said council hoped to set a date for a bond-issue election at its Monday meeting, but it could not proceed because information expected from bonding attorneys did not arrive on time.

Jim Coleman, the city's consulting engineer, advised council that the election and subsequent paperwork probably would not proceed fast enough to start the project this fall anyway, so the resolution to fix an election date was postponed.

Several council members have expressed reservations about holding the bond-issue election at the same time as a referendum on whether to annex a shopping-center cite north of the city. That election is slated Aug. 10. But Rainey said the discussion Monday related only to what needs to be done before taking the water issue to the voters.

In other business, several senior-citizen representatives spoke in favor of a block grant to construct a new senior center. The grant previously was submitted to state officials.

Weed office objects to landfill fee

JEROME — A.E. "Swede" Bartholomew, the supervisor of the Jerome County Weed Department, says he doesn't think his department should be charged for disposal of herbicide containers at the county landfill.

He told the county commissioners Monday that he has been billed $50 a month by the landfill operator for such disposal, but he hasn't paid the bill.

He said that he takes only about two loads of containers to the landfill each year. Most of the herbicide containers used by his department do not contain significant hazardous residue, he said, and they are sold to area farmers and other residents for use as trash burners or buckets.

Bartholomew suggested that the commissioners charge his department by the load, instead of by the month.

Commission Chairman Mel Grindstaff said the county allows the landfill operator to charge extra for chemical-container disposal because it is extra work. The containers must be buried immediately, he said.

The commissioners took Bartholomew's request under advisement.

County mulls virtue, need for computers

GOODING — The county commissioners met Monday with other elected officials in Gooding County to discuss the need for a county computer.

Commission Chairman Rick Brailsford indicated that no decision on the matter will be made for some time.

"We just met with them to try and get their feelings on the matter, and find out what their needs are," he said.

The commissioners also accepted a bid of $42,050 for a 1982 Ford ambulance from Fire and First-Aid Supply of Hyrum, Utah. The vehicle will replace one destroyed in a recent accident while it was responding to a call. The Utah firm was one of six that submitted bids. Two bids were rejected for technical reasons.

Wendell hires third patrolman for police force

WENDELL — A third patrolman has been hired by the Wendell Police Department.

Cliff Lauritzen was selected from 12 applicants by Mike Tambini, the acting police chief, and Mayor Otto Lemke, who also is the community's police commissioner.

Described by Tambini as "capable and fair," Lauritzen is a certified officer, with 11 years experience in Oregon, southeastern Idaho and, for the last four years, in Gooding.

Hazelton officials happy at response to license request

HAZELTON — Despite the fact that no leash law or mandatory rabies vaccination requirement is in effect in Hazelton, "all 93 dogs" have been licensed, according to the city clerk, Edith Utt.

"We asked all owners to please vaccinate their animals against rabies," Utt told Hazelton City Council on Monday night, but there is no positive way to ensure the vaccination or licensing, due to the lack of a leash law.

"City Council and Mayor Owen Hammond want it known that they very much appreciate the dogs being licensed," she said.

Correction

TWIN FALLS — A headline in Thursday's Times-News incorrectly indicated that the Cassia County commissioners had rejected an application for money to pay a medical bill submitted by an indigent couple. The application was taken under advisement, as was reported in the story.

Hydrogen to be autos' fuel of future

PASADENA, Calif. (UPI) — Researchers say the automotive future lies in hydrogen-powered vehicles that will be completely pollution free.

However, they admit drawbacks include a lack of naturally-occurring hydrogen in the atmosphere and the $20,000 cost of converting each of seven cars, unveiled as the "latest in hydrogen-powered transportation technology."

The vehicles appeared to be little different from the BMWs and Buicks already whizzing around the world's roadways.

But the technology crammed inside the seven cars has earned them glowing praise from scientists attending the five-day World Hydrogen Energy Conference, sponsored by the Atlantic Richfield Oil Co. and with Cal Tech and the Jet Propulsion Laboratory as hosts.

Among the more unusual inventions unveiled Tuesday was a one-of-a-kind liquid hydrogen refueling pump created by the German Aerospace Research Establishment.

Dr. Walter Peschka, a representative of the German manufacturer, said the five-foot rectangular pump could serve as a prototype for filling stations of the future when hydrogen-powered vehicles come into large-scale use.

Peschka said the converted BMW 520 he displayed emits no pollutants when fueled by hydrogen. But he admitted the current level of hydrogen technology makes the fuel about twice as expensive to use as conventional gasoline.

While the basic design of the car's engine remained the same and can still be powered by gasoline, the trick is in the trunk — a huge holding tank for liquid hydrogen.

Peschka said the red BMW has a 300-mile range on a full tank of hydrogen and can be driven at speeds upwards of 80 mph. Now that the prototype exists, he said, duplicate conversions could be completed for around $20,000.

But there are a number of things blocking widespread use of hydrogen for transportation, conference spokesman Walter Stewart said.

Stocks rally, then fade

Interest rates, budget deficit undercut market

By FRANK W. SLUSSER
United Press International

NEW YORK — After numerous rally attempts, stocks fell Wednesday for the 21st time in 27 sessions.

The decline came as interest rates nudged higher and Congress headed toward compromise on a deficit-ridden budget for 1983.

Volume was active thanks to a record block of trading in U.S. Steel and institutional unloading of a wide variety of issues in order to put their cash into high-yielding money market instruments.

The Dow Jones average industrial average, up more than four points at the outset following Tuesday's 0.58-point slide, shed 4.37 points to 796.90, near its 1982 low of 795.47 set March 8. It's down 72.30 points since May 7.

Technical analysts were encouraged the DJIA has been able to hold above the 795 level but were disappointed rally attempts failed to win support. Dow transportation averages hit a 1982 low as many companies predicted lower earnings.

The New York Stock Exchange index shed 0.38 to 62.67 and the price of an average share decreased 16 cents. Standard & Poor's 500-stock index dropped 0.62 to 108.87. Declines topped advances 823-617 among the 1,858 issues traded.

Big Board volume totaled 56,280,000 shares, up from the 44,970,000 traded Tuesday thanks to a record block of 5,250,000 shares of U.S. Steel.

U.S. Steel was the Big Board volume leader for the second consecutive day, rising ¼ to 18⅜ in trading that also included a block of 163,700 shares at 18⅜. USS has been seeking cash to pay for its Marathon Oil purchase.

Economic news was mixed. May housing starts rose 22.3 percent and topped the one million mark for the first time in 10 months.

But factories operated at 70.8 percent of capacity in May, down from 71 percent in April, and May industrial production was down 0.2 percent.

Federal funds rates banks charge one another stayed above the 14 percent level, causing other short-term charges to rise. Several banks have boosted their broker-loan rates.

Composite volume of NYSE issues listed on all U.S. exchanges and over the counter totaled 63,612,700 shares compared with 52,380,880 traded Tuesday.

The American Stock Exchange index shed 2.52 to 251.57 and the price of a share dropped 10 cents. Declines topped advances 284-202 among the 735 issues traded. Composite volume totaled 3,880,000 shares compared with 4,760,000 traded Tuesday.

The National Association of Securities Dealers' NASDAQ index of OTC stocks rose 0.25 to 171.44.

On the trading floor, American Telephone & Telegraph, which reported three months' earnings of $1.96 a share vs. $1.94 a year ago, lost ¾ to 51¼ in active trading. Some analysts have been negative about ATT recently.

Texaco was the second most active NYSE-listed issue, unchanged at 28⅞ with blocks of 250,000 shares and 343,000 shares, both at 29, and 101,000 shares at 28⅞.

Cities Service, which is battling to win control of Mesa Petroleum, was third on the active list, up 1¼ to 37¾. Mesa, which is seeking Cities Service, lost ⅝ to 16⅞.

Mobil Corp. shed ⅜ to 23⅛ after blocks of 100,000 shares at 23¼ and 300,000 shares at 23⅛. California Standard lost 1⅞ to 30⅛ with blocks of 280,000 shares at 31¾ and 200,000 shares at 30¾.

Pennzoil, a 1⅜-point loser Tuesday, gave up another 2⅛ to 30¾. The company is cutting back on copper mining production and discontinuing the use of credit cards at its retail outlets.

Cummins Engine, which skidded 3⅛ points Tuesday after predicting second- and third-quarter losses, surrendered another 2⅛ to 27 with a block of 100,000 shares at 27.

Helene Curtis, which expects to report lower first-quarter earnings, shed 1½ to 13.

Chicago Milwaukee Corp., a 3½-point winner the previous two sessions, jumped 2¼ to 58¾. An investor group, including Oppenheimer & Co. and a Swiss company, has boosted its stake in Chicago Milwaukee to 37.9 percent.

Stop & Shop, a ⅞-point winner Tuesday, tacked on 1 to 27¾. The company had a $2.2 million first-quarter profit vs. a $522,000 loss a year ago.

On the Amex, Dome Petroleum was the most active issue, unchanged at 4⅛. Wang Laboratories class B followed, off ¾ to 27⅝. Ranger Oil was third, off ¼ to 4⅞.

U.S. Steel shares in largest block trade

NEW YORK (UPI) — The largest stock trade in New York Stock Exchange history took place Wednesday morning when a block of 5.25 million shares of U.S. Steel was traded as part of a previously announced equity-for-debt swap by the nation's No. 1 steelmaker.

The value of the trade, estimated at $95.8 million, was the third largest dollar trade in exchange history. The trade was made at $18.25 a share, slightly above the issue's closing price of $18.125 Tuesday.

The previous largest block trade in terms of shares occurred March 14, 1972, when 5,245,000 shares of American Motors crossed at 7¼.

In terms of dollar value, the record block traded was on June 12, 1978, when 1.87 million shares of Cutler-Hammer were traded for a total value of $103 million. The second largest was a $98 million dollar block of The Reliance Group on Feb. 14, 1980.

New fuel-efficient Boeing 767s stand on parking apron outside Seattle plant

Boeing demonstrates 767 jetliner

CHICAGO (UPI) — The Boeing Co. flew one of its new 767 jetliners from Seattle Wednesday to demonstrate the new aircraft's fuel efficiency to the aviation industry.

The plane, bearing the red-white-and-blue trimmings of United Airlines, averaged 590 mph and made the 3½ hour flight to Chicago on 5,185 gallons of fuel — a full 300 gallons less than the smaller 727-200 would burn over the same trip.

The 767 has a passenger capacity of 210, compared with the 727's 140. Boeing engineers said the competitive European Airbus 300, a somewhat larger plane would have burned 7,270 gallons on the Seattle-Chicago flight.

Mel Volz, vice president of flying operations for United, which is scheduled to begin flying the 767 in September, was ecstatic in his praise of the aircraft.

"It's the best airplane I've ever flown," he said. "Once you get a feel of this airplane you don't want anyone to take it away from you."

The flight was made at a time of sagging orders for new aircraft from the ailing airline industry.

Shortly after United had announced it was negotiating with Boeing to postpone or cancel 20 of the 39 new 767s on order — worth $900 million — United said if Congress did not extend the 1981 leaseback tax break, the company would be forced to consider canceling all its 767 orders.

However, Volz said, the plane is proving to be so much more fuel efficient than expected, airlines will find a way to buy it despite hard times.

"The airplane is so desireable that the people who are interested in it are really going to massage the (cost) numbers to come out so they can afford to buy the airplane," Volz said.

Gasoline shortages forecast

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The United States faces higher gasoline and heating oil prices and possible shortages.

That is because oil companies are deliberately eliminating fuel surpluses and cutting back operations, a study concluded Wednesday.

The Citizen-Labor Energy Coalition said oil prices already have increased dramatically in recent months as a result of inventory liquidation and lowered refinery operations.

The study conducted by the coalition, a non-profit, public interest group, said current heating oil and gasoline stocks are lower than they were during the 1979 gasoline shortage, while prices have increased more than 10 cents in a month.

Oil companies, by "systematically eliminating the surplus of gasoline and heating oil have triggered price increases that will continue for the rest of the summer and have set the stage for possible supply shortages," the study said.

The American Petroleum Institute, an oil industry group, denounced conclusions of the study as "sheer nonsense," and said there is no reason for the American public to expect shortages in coming months, barring a disruption of imported oil supplies.

Business Beat

Ma Bell earnings rise 2¢

NEW YORK (UPI) — American Telephone & Telegraph Co., whose stock is the most widely-held in the nation, Wednesday reported earnings per share rose 1 percent to $1.96 in the three months ended May 31 from $1.94 a year earlier.

The communications giant blamed the "difficult economy" for the slow growth.

Net income for the three months rose 8.8 percent to $1.66 billion from $1.42 billion, on a 15.5 percent spurt in operating revenues to $16.1 billion from $13.91 billion.

"The narrow margin of improvement in the three-month period is a direct result of the difficult economy in which we have been operating," AT&T Chairman Charles L. Brown said.

Iacocca 'man of year'

DETROIT (UPI) — New York Yankees owner George Steinbrenner says he did not think Chrysler Corp. Chairman Lee Iacocca was so jealous of him that he would "take over a bankrupt company just to make commercials."

Steinbrenner — along with a host of other celebrities — toasted Iacocca Tuesday night at a gala dinner honoring the auto executive as Detroit's "Man of the Year."

Steinbrenner was chairman of the event, which was a benefit for Detroit's Northwestern Hospital.

He said Iacocca — "who has a personality like a dial tone" — has tried to emulate the television advertising success of himself, former Yankees pitcher Whitey Ford, who was also on the dias and Oakland Athletics manager Billy Martin.

Truck firm in trouble

CASPER, Wyo. (UPI) — A cash-flow problem at Salt Creek Freightways is placing the jobs of the firm's 525 employees in eight states in jeopardy.

Salt Creek president J. Francis Trimmer said a New York bank has demanded payment on part of a $4 million debt. Trimmer said the company has asked employees to give up half their wages in a pair of two-week periods, one in June and anothe in July, in order to raise $330,000 toward paying off the Citibank loan.

Salt Creek serves Colorado, Idaho, Montana, Minnesota, South Dakota, Utah and Washington in addition to Wyoming.

Jeep price cut remains

SOUTHFIELD, Mich. (UPI) — The price cut announced this spring on American Motors Corp. Jeep models will remain in effect for the rest of the model year.

The automaker also said it will extend through July 12 a five-year, 50,000-mile warranty program called Buyer Protection Plan 5 and $500 price cuts on Spirit, Concord and Eagle autos.

The current price of Jeep CJ and Scrambler models is $6,765 down between $750 to $1,000 from previous prices.

Drysdale liquidating now

NEW YORK (UPI) — Drysdale Securities Corp., parent of the ill-fated Drysdale Government Securities Inc. that defaulted on more than $200 million in interest to 30 major banks and brokerages, has announced it is liquidating.

Peter J. Wasserman, president of Drysdale Securities, said it was a "business decision" to liquidate the firm, which has been in business since 1889. However, he said the problems of DGSI "didn't help."

Drysdale Government defaulted on some $200 million in interest owed on more than $4.5 billion in securities it had borrowed from the biggest brokerage firms on Wall Street, using Chase Manhattan Bank as a middleman.

Construction costs up 5%

NEW YORK (UPI) — The cost of construction materials and labor across the nation increased an average 5.3 percent during the 12-month period ended in March, a survey showed Wednesday.

The data was based on the semi-annual survey of building trades unions, contractors and materials suppliers in 182 cities in the United States, made by the Cost Information Systems division of McGraw-Hill Inc.

Rival brands take a licking in TV commercials

Coors launches new campaign on Budweiser doorstep

ST. LOUIS (UPI) — The head of Adolph Coors Co. chose the home of beer industry leader Anheuser-Busch to introduce his company's new advertising campaign, which takes a swipe at Budweiser and other rival brands.

Coors Chairman William K. Coors said he hopes the new ads will "rekindle" sales of Coors Premium, the company's top brand.

Sales of the brand have dropped in recent years, company officials said. Overall company sales dropped 3.8 percent in 1981.

"What we're saying . . . is that this is the beer that's good for you," Coors said. "We can't say it that way but that's what we want to say in a different way."

The ad campaign makes direct references to rival brands in its television ads.

"Some people in our industry, who will go unnamed, will not be pleased," Coors told about 50 distributors and retailers at a Tuesday luncheon meeting.

The new ads, which began appearing this week in Coors's 20-state marketing area, stress the beer's freshness. One in a series of print ads shows a beer can on a shelf behind a spider web. The label has more than a passing resemblance to the Budweiser emblem.

"Strictly a coincidence," said regional sales director Ronald W. Rizzo. "I'd be flabbergasted if we didn't get some reaction."

The television ads make more direct comparisons. The camera pans across rival brands until it focuses on a Coors can. The announcer notes Coors' lack of preservatives.

"We're not doing anything that we haven't been doing for years," Coors said. "It's just something we haven't been telling the consumer about."

In an interview, Coors said he was unintimidated by introducing the new campaign in a hotel only blocks from Anheuser-Busch Co. headquarters.

"It's no different here than in Denver," Coors said. "Anheuser-Busch is just as visible in Denver as it is here."

Coors, which is based in Golden, Colo., is the nation's sixth-largest brewer.

The ads were produced by Ted. Bates Advertising Agency of New York. Coors would not divulge the cost of the new campaign but said there was no increase this year in the company's advertising budget.

Rizzo said Coors' total advertising expenditures in 1981 were $86 million.

Coors, noting that only a few brewing companies remain in the United States, said many of the country's remaining beer makers are in "extreme financial difficulty."

"We are not doing as well as we should be doing," he added.

Coors said the company is working on something he called Project Alpha, which involves sophisticated development of the barley used to make beer.

"We've got some vintage stuff out there," he said.

Grain futures

CHICAGO (UPI) — Wheat was substantially lower, corn lower, oats higher and soybeans mostly lower at the close Wednesday on the Chicago Board of Trade.

Wheat was off 5 to 11¼ cents; corn off ½ to 2½; oats up ¼ to 2¼; and soybeans up 1 to off 3¼ cents.

The market opened mixed; than trended lower the rest of the session on the lack of any fundamental news.

Hedge pressure, and prospects for a record wheat crop, dropped wheat futures to near session lows.

The July-November spread narrowed considerably in soybeans. July settled a penny higher while November was off 1½ cents.

Soybeans came under pressure when a large professional firm and locals began selling.

Improved export business provided underlying support. Japan bought 120,000 metric tons of wheat, and Taiwan was in the market for 81,000 tons of soybeans.

Elsewhere, the Soviet Union purchased 250,000 metric tons of corn and 540,000 tons of sorghum from Argentina, the first Soviet purchase since early April.

'Anemic' recovery may begin soon

By ANDREW A. LECKEY
© Chicago Sun-Times

CHICAGO — The recession-bound national economy has revived enough to begin its "anemic" recovery, according to economists at Chicago's First National Bank.

"The nation's real gross national product should rise at a modest 5 percent annual rate in the second half of this year, with the mid-year tax cut increasing consumer spending," said chief economist Roy E. Moor, who believes modest gains will be made in automobiles and household durables.

"Unfortunately," he added, "deteriorating balance sheets mean that the number of business failures will be greater than ever before this year, a trend which will continue throughout 1983."

Interest rates will subside slightly in September but remain high throughout the coming year, said James E. Annable, chief domestic economist.

Inflation will increase, with the Consumer Price Index moving from 2.2 percent in the second quarter to 4.5 percent in the fall and 6 percent in the fourth quarter, he added. No real surprises are expected in federal government policy, with the continuance of relatively tight monetary policy and a need to finance budget deficits, the economists agreed.

The bank expects the national unemployment to remain high, averaging about 9 percent throughout 1982 and 1983.

But the Midwest will remain on the critical list for the foreseeable future, the economists said in their prognosis Tuesday.

"There is no economic optimism for the Great Lakes region, with manufacturing jobs down by 1 million compared to early 1979," said Nina Klarich, the bank's chief regional economist. She predicted that the Midwest unemployment rate will remain for some time about 0.5 percent higher than the national figure.

Housing will remain the bleakest economic area throughout the nation, Moor said.

The nation suffers from an oversupply of condominiums and very little housing activity, Moor said. "There may be some deferred demands picking up the tempo a bit," but the situation should remain weak throughout the country, he said.

Housing starts should improve to a 1.1 million annual rate in the third quarter and 1.2 million in the fourth quarter, he said, remaining at that general level throughout 1983. Automobile sales will increase from the current 8.2 million rate to 8.9 million in the fall before reaching 9.2 million at year-end, Moor predicted.

While the tax cut should spur increased consumer spending, many Americans will choose not to spend their money until they are more confident about the economy, Moor said. He expects that the U.S. personal savings rate will improve from its current 5.8 percent level to 6.9 percent in the third quarter, remaining relatively strong in 1983 despite some fluctuations.

USSR wants higher floor for grain purchases

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A Soviet trade official says a new grain agreement between his country and the United States should raise minimum amounts of American wheat and corn the Soviets would promise to buy each year.

Yuri Kalashnikov, the acting Soviet trade representative, says the Soviet Union is "ready to discuss" raising purchase levels in an agreement and "the next step should be made by the American side."

In an interview published in The Wheat Grower, a magazine of the National Association of Wheat Growers, Kalashnikov suggested the possibility of raising minimum amounts of grain the Soviet Union would be obligated to buy each year to between 12 million and 15 million metric tons.

The six-year agreement that expires Sept. 30 requires the Soviet Union to buy at least 6 million tons of U.S. grain, half corn and half wheat and permits the Kremlin to buy up to 8 million tons without extra permission from the United States. Additional sales must be approved by the U.S. government.

Kalashnikov said in the interview that the Kremlin's stance on purchase ceilings would be based on the length of the negotiated agreement.

Agriculture Secretary John Block says he wants to negotiate a new agreement, but State Department officials are not moving on the matter.

Kalashnikov said an agreement should be restricted to cover grain only.

He said an agreement "should clarify that if certain amounts of grain are put under contract, they should be delivered." When President Carter embargoed grain in 1980 in response to the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan, existing contracts with the Soviet Union were broken.

Kalashnikov said his nation is "practically invulnerable" to economic sanctions imposed by the West. He complained about high American freight rates and people in the West with "certain political goals" who oppose extending generous credit to the Soviet Union.

Canada doubles grain sales to Soviet

OTTAWA (UPI) — Canada will sell a record 7.5 million metric tons of grains worth $1.3 billion to the Soviet Union this year, almost double the minimum required under the current five-year grain deal, Sen. Hazen Argue, minister responsible for the Wheat Board, said Wednesday.

Back in Canada after a trade visit to the U.S.S.R., Argue said the Soviets had firmly agreed to buy 5 million metric tons of wheat and 2.5 million metric tons of barley in the crop year ending July 31.

Washington braces for fireworks season with new laws

SEATTLE (UPI) — Nobody lit any cigarettes at a news briefing on state fireworks regulations which go into effect the week before the Independence Day holiday.

Tom Brace, chief deputy state fire marshal, sat behind a table strewn with lady fingers, M-80s, dynamite, bottle rockets, silver salutes, and other legal and illegal fireworks.

Brace predicted more fireworks-related injuries would occur this year as a result of the relaxed state standards adopted by the 1982 legislature.

But Bernard L. Crowell, vice president of Pyrodyne Corp., which distributes Red Devil Fireworks, pointed out that the state could expect an additional $1 million in sales tax revenues as a result of the changes.

The legislature approved changes to the state fireworks law to fit less stringent federal regulations, Brace said. The only area stricter than federal regulations is a prohibition on the sale and use of bottle rockets and missiles.

"Fire officials were concerned about the amount of fires that may result from the discharge of them," he said. "And their trajectory is just unchartable."

The sale and discharge of firecrackers or any other devices with up to 50 milligrams, or about one-eighth of a teaspoon, of gunpowder will be legal between June 28 and July 6.

"Safe and sane" labels will no longer be required on fireworks approved by the state fire marshal, Brace said.

"When we market fireworks in this state as 'safe and sane,' I think we create a false security," Brace said.

Even though the new regulations mean dangerous fireworks will be more available than in the past, he said the law will allow fire officials to seek out the truly dangerous fireworks and that it's better than a total ban.

"A total ban on fireworks, given the availability of them, would create a market for bootleg fireworks," he said.

He held up a "handmade firework," the equivalent of one-third of a stick of dynamite with the potential of blowing off a person's hand and arm. It had been confiscated in the state.

"Instead of running down 50 milligrams of ladyfingers, we can devote our time to this sort of thing right here," he said, handling the brown stick.

He said the injuries that result from fireworks where they are totally banned are much worse than in areas where they are regulated.

Under current regulations, injuries generally occur when fireworks are not used properly, said Dr. David Heimbach, medical director at the Harborview Burn Center.

He described the case of a boy who took the gunpowder out of six packages of ladyfingers, lit it, and burned his hand. Another boy threw a lighted firecracker down his sister's dress, he said.

Dr. James L. Kinyoun, an assistant professor of opthamology at the University of Washington, said 20 percent of eye injuries are caused by fireworks.

Regional power unit chief pushes energy conservation

SPOKANE (UPI) — Northwest Power Planning Council Chairman Dan Evans made another pitch Wednesday for his concept of a "supermarket" of energy resources, with the best shelf space given to energy conservation efforts.

Evans said such a concept might be the best way of coping with the uncertainties that lie ahead for the Northwest.

"We need to build a supermarket of resources and stack the shelves as best we can," Evans told local government leaders attending the annual convention of the Association of Washington Cities.

"What we've got to do is learn how to live with uncertainty and plan for uncertainty," he said. "We need sufficient, reliable electrical energy."

Evans said there's a "gold mine" of energy available in the form of conservation, which he called the "preferred answer" to the region's energy problems.

DAN EVANS
Power needs to grow

Even with modest load growth, Evans said the Northwest will still need to double energy production in the next 30 years. But he reminded that half the electricity generated in the region is lost for one reason or another.

"I prefer energy efficiency," Evans said. "To some, conservation means going without, turning the thermostat down and being uncomfortable."

But Evans said conservation is only one answer and new generating plants will still be needed.

Along the lines of his "supermarket" concept, Evans suggested obtaining the necessary permits for several projects and then stockpiling them until they're needed. He said this could cut the lead time of such projects by more than half.

Evans said his council is currently halfway through the process of drafting a 20-year energy plan for the region, but many questions remain unanswered.

"At halftime in this process, I'm still unable to tell you what the final score will be, or whether we will be winners or losers," Evans said.

"But if you can be a realist when it comes to energy, you can afford to be an optimist because of all the options before us," he said.

But as important an issue as energy is, delegates to the convention are more concerned about the economy and its impact on their cities, said Phyllis Shrauger, a Hoquiam City Council member and president of the AWC.

She said legislators have a "horrendous job ahead of them" as they prepare to meet in special session later this month to deal with another state budget deficit.

"We have concerns we may be whittled too and cities are just in no position to be whittled more," she said. "Some of us are at rock bottom."

She said the problem of declining revenues has been further complicated by the Reagan administration's "new federalism" policy of giving local governments more responsibility for social services.

"It means there will be fewer grants and less money," she said. "It means we'll have to do more with less."

Purloined information suit settled before trial

NEWPORT, Ore. (UPI) — A $6 million lawsuit claiming sheriff's deputies coerced a legal secretary into providing confidential information on a woman convicted of harboring a federal spy has been settled out of court for $5,000.

County Attorney Nancy Craven said she withheld announcement of the sum until a final agreement had been reached.

Five deputies and Lincoln County District Attorney Erik Wassman were sued after Janice Orey Sroufe claimed she was coerced into providing the information on Gloria White, who was convicted in Idaho of harboring Christopher Boyce. The suit alleged that the secretary searched the files, papers and effects and work premises in the law office along with the personal files and records of law firm partner J.F. Ouderkirk, who represented White.

The agreement termed the claims by Ouderkirk and others in the law firm that there civil rights had been violated "doubtful and disputed." The settlement also specified that the agreement is a "compromise ... and is not to be considered an admission of responsibility by the parties."

The state attorney general's office notified the county that it should release the amount of the settlement or face the risk of violating public disclosure laws. A Newport weekly newspaper, The News-Times Publishing Co., had filed a petition seeking a court-ordered disclosure last week.

"If the county is a party to an agreement by or on behalf of the county which provides for payment in settlement of a suit then they are subject to state meeting law and disclosure requirements," said John Reuling of the attorney general's office.

Sources involved in the lawsuit said problems arose with an affidavit by the legal secretary regarding her coercion statement when several of her claims could not be substantiated.

Bishop thinks Reagan scoffs at nuclear foes

SAN JOSE, Calif. (UPI) — Methodist Bishop Wilbur Y.Y. Choy, who held the Bible when Ronald Reagan was inaugurated California governor in 1967, says the president is underestimating the strength of the nuclear disarmament movement.

"It is a legitimate movement and it is firmly rooted in mainstream America," says Choy, head of the 103,000-member California-Nevada Conference of the United Methodist Church which opened its 134th annual session Wednesday.

"Millions of Americans fear we are dealing with something that could very well spell the end of humanity," said Choy, the first Asian-American appointed a bishop in the church.

"Naturally, we grow increasingly concerned when we hear our president telling supporters of the movement to 'take it up with Brezhnev,'" said Choy, former chaplain of the state Senate during Reagan's gubernatorial reign.

Choy, a San Francisco bishop, said he agrees with Reagan that the nation's foreign policy can only operate from a position of strength, including a strong defense, but he said the administration's five-year $1.6 trillion military commitment is too much.

"I find it significant that the present administration is quick to cite incidents of waste in the areas of human services but cannot muster up the strength to publicly criticize incidents of waste found in the defense industries."

The 1,500 delegates at the five-day conference of ministers and lay people at the San Jose Convention Center were expected to take a strong stand on the nuclear disarmament issue and debate such other topics as a proposed state lottery and abortion rights.

Court denies actress' claim

AUSTIN, Texas (UPI) — The Texas Supreme Court Wednesday upheld a lower court decision denying actress Terry Moore's claim that she is entitled to a share of Howard Hughes' vast estate.

Moore claimed she and Hughes were married in 1949 on a yacht off San Diego, but testified at a trial in Houston she could not remember the date of the event nor the name of the yacht.

The captain she said performed the ceremony, C.R. Flynn Sr., is dead.

She testified she and Hughes first exchanged "marrige vows" on a lovers' lane in Los Angeles in 1948, but said she never considered that a valid marriage.

Hughes died April 5, 1976, on an airplane en route to Houston.

Harris County Probate Court No. 2 had granted a summary judgment denying Moore's claim to a share of the Hughes estate, and the Supreme Court, without comment, affirmed that decision.

Blasts puzzle coast town

PORT ANGELES, Wash. (UPI) — Clallam County authorities are baffled by a rash of mysterious explosion-like noises similar to those which shook the east coast several years ago.

Police say dozens of callers described the noises as sharp booms lasting several seconds and strong enough to rattle houses. The mysterious blasts have been heard off and on for the past few weeks, but have increased in frequency during the past week, with as many as five to ten incidents reported daily.

The reports have centered around Port Angeles and Sequim near the Washington State-Canadian border.

Port Angeles Police Chief Mike Cleland said his officers are "baffled" by the noises and have made dozens of phone calls trying to locate the source.

Checks with a wide variety of agencies in Washington state and on Vancouver Island, B.C., including the military, have failed to turn up any clues.

A similar rash of explosive sounds occurred several years ago on the east coast. No source was ever found for those blasts, but some speculated the sounds originated with atmospheric conditions.

Staff makes sure of age

OKLAHOMA CITY (UPI) — When Oklahoma Gov. George Nigh told a well-wisher recently that his age was the same as the highway speed limit, he said the visitor asked in amazement: "Seventy?"

Just to make sure no one was confused, his staff presented Nigh a 10-foot-high birthday card Wednesday saying "Happy 55th" on a background of a highway sign reading: "Speed Limit 55."

Nigh's birthday was June 9.

Test tube baby goes home

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Christine Yung Lee, the nation's third test tube baby and first born on the West Coast, has been released from the hospital with her mother.

The infant's mother, 33, whose name was not disclosed at her request, was picked up by her husband Tuesday afternoon.

Mrs. Lee, a Korean-American who lives in the Los Angeles area, wanted to have a child for 10 years but was described as "hopelessly infertile" by Dr. Richard Marrs, director of County-USC Medical Center's in vitro fertilization program.

Her healthy, 7-pound daughter was born Friday. Christine was the third baby to be born in the United States through use of the in vitro fertilization process, in which an egg from the mother is fertilized outside the body, then re-implated into her uterus where it develops for the usual nine months.

Medfly about conquered

LOS GATOS, Calif. (UPI) — State and federal agricultural officials this week are planning to declare complete eradication of the Mediterranean fruitfly in a 1,308 square-mile area in southern Santa Clara and Santa Cruz counties.

Barring discovery of new Medflies or larvae, the region will be removed from the U.S. Agriculture Department's quarantine zone Friday, a spokesman for the Medfly Project Headquarters said.

It will reduce the quarantine area to 1,640 square miles, including all of Alameda and San Mateo counties, and smaller regions in Santa Cruz and Santa Clara.

The region to be freed from quarantine Friday has passed through three complete Medfly life cycles without discovery of new flies.

No live Medflies have been found in the state since Nov. 20, 1981 — about five months after Gov. Edmund G. Brown, bowing to pressure from the Reagan administration, approved an aerial spraying campaign against the pest.

Idaho vet sets defense

SPOKANE (UPI) — A Vietnam veteran accused of taking three people hostage at the Veterans Administration Hospital will enter a defense of temporary insanity or diminished mental capacity if the case goes to trial.

Bobby Johnston, 35, Rathdrum, Idaho, pleaded not guilty Tuesday in Spokane County Superior Court to three counts of kidnapping.

Johnston is charged with holding three hospital staff members hostage for 70 minutes during the early morning hours of March 4 after demanding to see a psychiatrist he had talked to the day before.

The hostages were later released unharmed, but not before Johnston reportedly fired one shot from a .32 caliber revolver.

During the ordeal, Johnston told his hostages he had developed some kind of psychiatric trouble following his service in Vietnam, and police officers said he may have been suffering from delayed stress syndrome.

Johnston is scheduled to stand trial Aug. 16. He is represented by attorney Jim Shively, a former prisoner of war in Vietnam.

Assessor opposes rollback

SPOKANE (UPI) — Spokane County Assessor George Britton has come out in opposition to Initiative 410, which would roll back property valuations to 1977 levels.

Britton said passage of the initiative would force drastic cutbacks by local government and disrupt delivery of vital services.

Britton said some taxing agencies could get around the initiative by passing special levies, but most governmental agencies would be hurt.

Aurora may glow in skies

BOULDER, Colo. (UPI) — Residents of the northern United States may be treated to a "northern lights" effect this week because of a large flare on the sun, a federal scientist said.

The National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration Tuesday reported the X-3 and X-1 flares, and said the larger one could disrupt communications on Earth by today. A NOAA official said the X-3 and X-1 flares occurred at 4:20 a.m. and 11:07 a.m. MDT, respectively.

Joe Hirman, NOAA chief forecaster, said protons from the X-3 flare would reach Earth today, producing geomagnetic disturbances and an aurora borealis effect at northern latitudes.

"There's a good chance the northern lights may be seen as far south as 40 degrees latitude," he said. "This would represent a line stretching roughly from Philadelphia through Indianpolis, Kansas City, Denver, Salt Lake City and ending just north of San Francisco."

Hirman said additional flares with a greater potential for producing terrestrial effects were likely next week.

Indian faces prison term

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — An Indian medicine man faces up to two years in prison and a $20,000 fine for possessing feathers, talons and heads from federally protected bald and golden eagles.

Robert Payne, 54, Victorville, Calif., pleaded guilty Tuesday to two possession counts and U.S. Magistrate James Penne ordered him to return to court July 14 for sentencing. He faces up to a year in prison and a $10,000 fine on each count.

Prosecutor Nicholas DeWitt said Payne got the eagle parts from an illicit source in Nevada that is under investigation by the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service.

Payne told the magistrate he had gotten the parts from eagles killed by automobiles along a road in Northern California, and his attorney said he used them for religious ceremonies.

Jury rules student innocent

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — A psychology student has been found innocent of assault charges in the stabbing of a woman who apparently became enraged when he asked her to douse her cigarette in an elevator at San Francisco State University.

A Superior Court jury said in its verdict Tuesday that Richard Moss, 38, a graduate student, used his knife in self defense.

Moss testified that he had politely asked Doris Collum, 26, to put out her cigarette or leave the elevator on February 26, and that she screamed at him and twisted his arm painfully behind his back.

Quakes rattle desert regions

ANZA, Calif. (UPI) — Boulders tumbled into ravines, dishes and teacups shattered and pictures fell off walls, but no one was injured and damage was slight in a moderate earthquake that rattled six Southern California counties.

Seismologists said the quake, which struck Tuesday at 5:49 p.m. MDT, measured 4.8 on the Richter scale and its epicenter was "right under the little town of Anza," a small community 20 miles south of Palm Springs.

Another temblor, apparently an aftershock of Tuesday's quake, rattled Southern California at 3:08 a.m. MDT today. Police departments reported getting several calls but there were no reports of damage.

Steve Calkins said he was about to sit down to dinner with his partner at the state Forestry Department station in Anza when Tuesday's quake struck.

"I stood up and he headed for the door," Calkins said. "It only lasted five or 10 seconds, but it was accompanied by a deep rumble. I've never heard that before. I won't forget that sound."

Residents in Los Angeles, Orange, Riverside, San Bernardino, Imperial and San Diego counties telephoned police to report feeling the quake, described by most as a short, sharp jolt.

There were no reports of structural damage, but several residents said pictures fell off their walls and dishes and cans tumbled from their shelves.

"We heard about a lot of pictures falling off walls and dishes breaking," said Cindy Weirbach, a Riverside County sheriff's dispatcher in Hemet, a farming and retirement community 25 miles to the northwest.

"A lot of people were shaken up," added police dispatcher Debbi Ring.

Deputy Guy Wallace in Palm Desert said the earthquake was felt throughout the Palm Springs desert resort area and the temblor dislodged some boulders from the San Jacinto Mountains.

The boulders landed in ravines, however, and caused no damage or injury.

"My couch started to shake," said Hertha Peckar, who lives on the fifth floor of an apartment building in Hollywood. "It lasted about three seconds."

Pastor Paul Martin at the San Juan Capistrano Mission, about 60 miles west of the epicenter, said he was sitting in his office and "could feel it under the chair pretty good."

Martin said the mission's famed swallows, whose migratory flights are celebrated in song and have become a popular tourist attraction, did not appear to be disturbed by the quake.

'Not guilty,' says porn ring suspect

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — A welfare mother who allegedly earned $545,000 a year running the nation's largest child-pornography ring was represented by a public defender who pleaded innocent on her behalf to obscenity charges.

Municipal Court Judge Samuel Mayerson appointed the taxpayer-funded attorney for Catherine Stubblefield Wilson when she failed to bring a lawyer to her arraignment.

Public defender Dale Frailey pleaded innocent on her behalf to 13 felony counts of distributing child pornography and two misdemeanor counts of distributing obscene materials involving adults.

Police said Mrs. Wilson, 43, a mother of five children, received welfare while earning a six-figure income and driving a fleet of luxury autos by distributing "kiddie porn" to 30,000 customers throughout the United States, Canada, England and Denmark. She is being held in lieu of $250,000 bail.

Prosecutor Lael Rubin said Frailey may continue to represent Mrs. Wilson at her June 28 preliminary hearing, but she will have to retain her own attorney if ordered to stand trial.

At the end of criminal proceedings, a judge will determine how much Mrs. Wilson must reimburse the court for cost of the public defender's services.

CATHERINE WILSON
Faces obscenity charges

A co-defendant, Richard Eugene Trollo, 42, who led police to Mrs. Wilson, has been charged on similar counts and faces a July 22 preliminary hearing.

Grand jury sets probe of Mexican's slaying

HIDALGO, Texas (UPI) — Officials said Wednesday a grand jury will be asked to review the gunshot slaying of a Mexican by a member of the Agriculture Department's "tick-riders" patrol, which is seeking congressional approval to carry guns.

Raymond Smith, head of the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Animal Plant Health Inspection Service, said authorities Wednesday still were investigating the apparent accidental shooting of a Reynosa, Mexico, man believed to be involved in horse smuggling.

Ruben Guardiola, about 35 to 45, was shot in the head Tuesday near the Rio Grande about two miles south of the Hidalgo International Bridge.

"We haven't got all the information yet. It's our understanding it was accidental," Smith said.

Smith said three tick-riders — Agriculture Department inspectors who patrol the Texas-Mexico border to assure animals carrying ticks are not smuggled into the United States before being checked for disease — were investigating a report that a man planned to smuggle a horse into Mexico.

The officers saw a man walking the horse toward the river and asked him to halt but he continued walking, Smith said.

"They were in thick brush and he was coming toward the inspector, who had spurs on. The spurs hung in the brush and he tripped and fell backward, and the gun went off," Smith said.

Smith said the name of the inspector was being withheld. The case will be referred to a grand jury, Smith said.

Smith said the tick-riders have asked Congress to allow them to carry guns because of danger along the border.

Officers jail candy seller

EL PASO, Texas (UPI) — A 40-year-old man suspected of keeping more than two dozen hungry children crammed in two small motel rooms during a candy-selling trek through west Texas was being held on a charge of indecency with a child.

Bilal Mohammed Ali was arrested late Tuesday, a police sergeant said. His bond was set at $100,000.

Investigators questioned the 29 youngsters, who said Ali hired them to sell candy. Seven adults also were found in the Stardust Motel late Monday.

Ali owns a door-to-door candy selling business in San Antonio, Texas.

Texas Department of Human Resources officials said they received an anonymous telephone tip about the children, who were moved to a temporary shelter Tuesday.

Some children said they had not been fed for 24 hours when Ali gave each of them a cup of cold cereal.

Volcano spouts towering gas plume

VANCOUVER, Wash. (UPI) — Mount St. Helens sent a gas plume containing some ash to about 20,000 feet Wednesday.

"It looks to be about 20,000 feet. Visual observation said there was a little light ash in the thing, probably old ash from the crater floor," said Jerry Brown, director of the federal Emergency Management Agency in Vancouver.

Brown said the plume appeared to be drifting to the southeast.

Bob Norris of the University of Washington geophysics department said the plume is typical of activity from the volcano over the past few weeks.

"This is standard," said Norris. "Gas emission, burst of steam and gas. We get bursts of gases from the dome quite frequently. It's just giving everyone a good look at it today."

Mike Rodgers, who soon will "trade" his cows for law books, feeds a prize Hereford

'Veteran' farmer trades tractor for briefcase

By KAREN MAIN
Times-News correspondent

CASTLEFORD — One of Castleford's finest young farmers will be leaving the fields of agriculture for the field of law this fall.

Eighteen-year-old Mike Rodgers, the 1982 winner of the top state Future Farmers of America award and the owner of the grand champion steer at Twin Falls County Fair in 1981, will enter the University of Idaho in August.

What makes Rodgers remarkable is that he farmed up to 160 acres of his own land and tended 40 to 60 head of cattle as part of an FFA project throughout high school.

In addition to his farm project, which won him the FFA State Star Farmer award, and other daily chores, Rodgers managed to find time for other endeavors. While attending Castleford High School, he was manager of the varsity basketball team, a member of the football team, pursued a hobby in photography and was listed in "Who's Who Among American High School Students."

Rodgers is also president of the Idaho Junior Polled Hereford Association and area director for the National Junior Polled Hereford Association. And he has traveled around the country, winning many national awards for his registered cattle.

"He's exceptional," says Jerry Allred, who was Rodger's vocational agriculture teacher and FFA adviser throughout high school.

"He was right there at the top" of the approximately 4,400 active FFA members in the state, his teacher says.

Allred, who describes Rodgers as "kind of a quiet boy" in school, says that in his four years of overseeing students' farm projects, "none have done that much."

"He really puts in the time. It was not just a 'paper' project," says Jack Kinyon, the editor of the state FFA newspaper.

Naturally, Rodgers' parents are proud of their son's accomplishments, too.

"You don't see him on the front page as a juvenile delinquent," says his father. "He has his mind on other things. I think that's what all kids should have."

The son of local farmers, Frank and Margaret Rodgers, the hard-working young man first started his farming projects in elementary school. He joined the 4-H Club in Colorado and later in Idaho, when his family moved here in 1973. He started by raising farm animals for competition.

"When I would sell them, I would cry," Rodgers says. So, he had to learn not to become so attached to the animals.

"They don't become pets like they used to when I was younger."

In his freshman year of high school, Rodgers won the Star Greenhand award, competing against students from 13 high schools that comprise the FFA West Magic Valley District, which is one of eight districts in the state.

During each year of high school, he also won the FFA chapter beef-production proficiency award.

"Right from the beginning, he was showing his true colors," Allred says.

Jerome will purchase computer accessories

Commissioners feel system has helped county

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer

JEROME — The purchase of additional equipment to meet the immediate needs of Jerome County's computer system was approved Monday by the county commissioners.

The equipment, costing $25,945, will include an extra storage disc for the computer's memory, an additional terminal for the assessor's office, a small printer for the sheriff's office and a larger print-out machine for the treasurer's office.

"I think we have finally reached a point where we are seeing some beneficial returns on our investment," Commissioner Russell Howell Jr. said of the computer system.

The Jerome County computer system has been in use for about a year, and commission Chairman Mel Grindstaff said he, too, can see some savings in time and money. Elections, tax notices, assessment notices and other county projects are being made easier and faster by the computer, he said.

"I feel a lot better about it now than I did six months ago. We also have an opportunity to get something back (a financial return) on the software," he said.

"There is a possibility we can tape the programs from our computers and sell them to other counties outside of Idaho. It would save a county (that's) going into computer programing for the first time a lot of money and time if they can buy a program already designed."

He said the county can not sell the program tapes to other Idaho counties at the present time because of an agreement with Idaho Computer Service, the company that designed Jerome's programs and is designing them for other counties that are buying similar computer equipment.

Does community need it?

Citizens' complaint prompts Hagerman zoning discussion

By TERRELL WILLIAMS
Times-News correspondent

HAGERMAN — A large gas tank installed recently in downtown Hagerman has prompted a petition of protest — and a discussion of whether the community needs zoning laws.

At its regular meeting Tuesday, Hagerman City Council received a petition, signed by 29 residents, objecting to a 20,000-gallon tank installed above ground on State Street by Phil Johnson. The petition signers called the gas tank dangerous.

Barbara Lawrson, the chairman of the Planning and Zoning Commission, discussed with council the benefits of zoning the city and drafting an ordinance to require business licenses. At present, the city is not zoned and no licenses are required.

According to Mayor Karen Yarbrough, zoning the city would help the Planning and Zoning Commission govern development.

Business licensing, she said, would help control other local problems, such as a dog kennel in a residential area, which, according to Councilman Mark Bolduc, has been creating a noise problem at night.

Yarbrough said that in general, business licensing would help council stay better informed on city developments and enable council to prevent problems more effectively.

At its next meeting, after the study and zoning divisions and business licensing ordinances of other cities, council may take some action.

In a related matter, Lawrson announced the names of three new members of the Planning and Zoning Commission — Eunice Holt, Elwood Grimes and Garland Wallace.

In other business, council voted to keep City Hall open only half-days, from 8:30 a.m. to noon, during the vacation of the city clerk, Audrey Hoffman, from July 6-12. The mayor and council members will take over the office duties so the city will not need to hire a replacement.

Jerome school board will seek bids for new multi-purpose building

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer

JEROME — A bid opening for a new multi-purpose building at Jerome High School has been set for July 7 at 2 p.m.

The Jerome school board set the date Monday night during its regular monthly meeting. Superintendent Percy Christensen said the state Department of Education has reviewed and approved the building plans.

The building, designed for geology, vocational agriculture and other classes, also will provide storage space for the school district.

The district is hoping to build an all-metal building. Alternate bids are being sought for a cinder-block building if the costs of the metal structure are too high.

Earlier this year, the board accepted an insurance settlement of about $74,000 for the loss of a storage building to fire. Part of that money will be used to help pay for the new building, which is expected to cost $80,000 for the shell.

The school district plans to hold down the cost of the facility by furnishing all of the interior work from its own resources, including divider walls, plumbing and fixtures.

In other action:

• The board approved a proposal by Robert Lawson, a counselor and the special education director, to hire two new staff members in the elementary schools. One will be a part-time curriculum coordinator and part-time consulting teacher at the elementary level.

The other will be a social worker to assist in problems between home and school and to work with children who show learning difficulties because of such problems.

The board questioned the propriety of schools getting involved in that type of service, but Lawson said that in a meeting with all school principals, it was felt the position would be a major help to the schools.

• The board delayed action on a request for $1,975 to pay for minimum public health services in the coming school year. The South Central District Health Department had been furnishing nursing services to the district for free. But as a result of cuts in state funding, the health department is now charging for its services. The board must decide if it wishes to pay that amount for the health service or if it will discontinue it.

Christensen said the district uses the health services on an irregular basis, but he said that when the service is needed, it is needed badly.

Board Chairman Nancy Churchman, a registered nurse, was asked to study the district's needs before a decision is made.

Rattlers concern residents

JEROME — A delegation of residents told Jerome City Council on Tuesday night that snakes do not make good neighbors.

Their complaint prompted council to call for an ordinance to govern snakes and other "dangerous pets" within the city limits.

Several residents complained about a man who, they said, catches and brings home sacks full of rattlesnakes and "plays with them" in his lawn.

The man lives on East J Street, and his neighbors are afraid some of the snakes will get away and crawl into their lawns and shrubs.

Police Chief Darryl Cameron said the man has been told to keep the snakes in the house, but he said there is no city or state law that governs the possession of snakes.

Cameron said he has asked the city's attorney, Rob Williams, to prepare such an ordinance.

Cameron said there is a possibility that small children playing in the vicinity could be in danger should some of the snakes escape.

Buhl council takes action to 'spruce up' the community

By KAREN MAIN
Times-News correspondent

BUHL — Although it may be a little late for spring cleaning, Buhl City Council made some resolutions at Monday night's meeting that should spruce up the city.

In one case, a public hearing was set for Tuesday, June 29, at 7 p.m. regarding the alleged public nuisance caused by Darrell Taylor's milk trucks off Clear Lakes Avenue.

According to Marge Traxler, who represented 11 neighbors who live adjacent to Taylor in the residential area, up to 13 vehicles at a time are parked in his front and back yards.

The trucks obstruct traffic, create noise and emit noxious diesel fumes, Traxler told council.

Mayor Jim Barker, who previously had inspected the site, said, "In my estimation, I believe that a state of nuisance does exist."

In two other cases, the city wants property owners to clean up their unsightly land.

In a letter from the city, Luke Parnell will be advised that he has until June 28 to remove the stumps, weeds and other debris from the property he owns where the former elementary school was located.

The owners of Gasoline Alley, a garage and car wash, were not given a set time period in which to move the vehicles and equipment parts that are on their land.

"As long as they show good faith" and continue their efforts to clean up the property, "we will not make a deadline," Councilman Tom Tappen said.

A recommendation from the mayor might also lead to enhancing the beauty of Buhl.

Barker proposed that the city spend up to $500 of its federal revenue-sharing money to have a study done on downtown landscaping.

Downtown property owners could then decide if they want to form a business improvement district to pay for the landscaping and form a "downtowners' association" to maintain the upkeep of the trees and shrubs, the mayor said.

Councilmen Tappen and Terry Lochner said, however, that they would prefer that the business community initiate the project.

It was decided that the mayor will talk with Chamber of Commerce members to see if they are interested in that idea.

In other business:

• Interstate Mack Inc. of Twin Falls was awarded the bid for a new fire truck. Its bid of $134,400 was the lowest received by the city.

The 1,500-gallon-per-minute pumper will have a 10- to 12-month delivery date.

It will "possibly be this time next year" before Buhl has the new truck, fire Chief Mark Grimes said.

John Howell, a representative of Starline Equipment of Boise, which also had bid on the fire truck, protested the awarding of the contract to Interstate Mack.

According to Howell, the truck to be purchased is "far below" the standards requested by the city.

"If you're going to take a truck that doesn't meet your standards, every company should have a chance," he said.

"We could have bid less, too," Howell said. "It's not apples and apples is what I'm trying to say."

"This truck meets the needs of the city," Tappen said. "We felt this was the most truck for the least money."

• Council approved a "fly-in" of ultra-light aircraft at the Buhl airport for June 26 and 27.

Ken Stutzman, representing the Ultra-Light Association, said the event, which will feature up to 25 of the airplanes, will be the first in Idaho.

"If this is a success for them, this could be an annual event," Barker said.

• Fire Chief Mark Grimes agreed to look into safety codes that persons who supply their own gas for their planes at the Buhl airport might be violating.

Jim Matthiesen of the Buhl Flying Service, who is authorized to refuel planes, said people are bringing 55-gallon drums of gasoline to the airport for their own use, which he fears is dangerous.

Matthiesen said he could not approach the Buhl Airport Commission with the matter because one of its members also uses his own gas.

The gasoline pumped by Matthiesen has a two-cent charge on every gallon to raise revenue for financing the airport.

• Council agreed to close off part of 11th Street during Buhl Sagebrush Days for the carnival, which will be expanded to five or six rides this year.

A $100-per-day carnival fee also was waived because Jack Ramsey told counil the Chamber of Commerce would be responsible for any cleaning up afterward.

• Jim Lynch was approved to replace Ron Brackett on the Buhl Planning and Zoning Commission. Brackett resigned recently.

School budgets

Gooding board OKs $1.8 million budget

GOODING — The Gooding school board approved a $1.8 million budget for the 1982-83 school year Monday night.

Spending in the district will increase 17 percent over last year's $1.503 million budget.

According to Superintendent Eugene Gibbons, funds that will come from property taxes are projected at $250,170, compared to $230,000 in 1981-82.

The district has budgeted state-support funding at $1,153,513, a 13 percent increase. Much of the increased state funding came from the addition of two funding units due to increased enrollment last year, Gibbons said. Each funding unit represents $25,040.

Expenditures for instruction — which includes books, materials and salaries — are projected to increase 16 percent, bringing the figure to $1.178 million. Teachers' salaries account for $980,000 of the instructional budget, Gibbons said.

The district faced it's biggest spending increases in the area of fixed costs, he said. These include a 31 percent increase in the cost of employee insurance costs, 30 percent in heating costs and 30 percent in other utilities.

Local property taxes, including a $61,000 maintenance and operation override levy that was passed in May, will contribute $191,000 to the district's revenue, Superintendent Kenneth Crothers said.

State funding to the district is projected to increase in 1982-83 by 17 percent, to $500,244, including an additional funding unit the district hopes to gain as a result of increased enrollment in the 1982-83 school year.

Crothers said the budget will take into account increases in fixed charges, including a 42 percent increase for employee insurance.

"It may or may not be enough," he said. "We're praying it will be."

Money for instructional purposes, including salaries, books and materials, has been projected at $543,027, an increase of 7 percent.

Shoshone's budget goes up 7.5 percent

SHOSHONE — The Shoshone school board approved a $785,000 budget for the 1982-83 school year Monday night. The budget represents a 7.5 percent increase in spending over last year.

Jones said there is a chance the district will gain one elementary funding unit next year. Funding units, worth $25,040 in state money, are based on enrollment.

If a funding unit is gained, Jones said the money probably will be used to start an elementary school resource room for children having learning problems.

Richfield schools to spend $580,000

RICHFIELD — The Richfield school board approved a $580,000 budget for the 1982-83 school year Monday night.

The budget is an 11 percent increase over last year's $521,310 budget.

Local property taxes earmarked for the school district increased from $79,187 to $82,718 this year, according to Superintendent Jay Jones, a 5 percent increase.

State support for the district increased 9 percent, to $293,373.

The budget basically will maintain the status quo in the district, according to Jones, since the district had to budget increased amounts for fixed charges, such as employee insurance and utilities.

Spending in Camas to grow by 4 percent

FAIRFIELD — The Camas County School District has approved a $516,000 budget for the 1982-83 school year — a 4 percent increase over last year.

Local property taxes will contribute $106,964 to the budget, 5 percent more than in 1981-82.

State support to the school district will be $266,000, compared to $256,000 last year, Superintendent Harold Stroud told the school board Monday night during the budget hearing.

The district has been hit hard by fixed costs, he said, especially rate increases in employee insurance. After cutting the amount of insurance carried by the district by dropping life and dental insurance, and changing insurance companies, the cost of the insurance still increased 12.8 percent, he said.

The instructional budget for the district, including salaries, books and materials will be $333,000, Stroud said, a 6 percent increase over last year.

East end of Jerome County is focus of historical tour

JEROME — The Jerome County Historical Society will be touring some historic sites in the east end of the county this Saturday.

The tour will begin at 10 a.m. at Eden City Hall and will stop for a noon lunch at Greenwood Park. Those participating in the tour should bring a sack lunch.

John Roice, a native of the Eden area, is working with the historical society to plan the tour.

He said tentative plans call for visits to the site of the old Hillsdale post office, the sites of old schools and the inspection of old railroad grades.

His grandfather's house, which was built on the Roice farm in 1911 and later moved to Eden, also will be featured, although there will not be an interior tour of the home.

Don Sparhawk, the general chairman of the tour, says that anyone interested is welcome to participate.

Wendell alters its policy for 'failing' students

By TERRELL WILLIAMS
Times-News correspondent

WENDELL — Agreeing that encouragement, not threats, is more effective with students, the Wendell school board has reversed a policy change it made in March.

The original policy stated that if a student is earning passing grades in three required academic subjects, he is eligible to participate in extracurricular activities.

In March, the school board made what appeared to be a minor change in this policy, by saying that a student who failed one required academic subject would be ineligible to participate in sports and clubs for the following nine-week period.

However, according to Superintendent Glenn Gilbertson, requiring students to pass or give up their activities was not an effective way to make failing students do better. The activities, he said, help keep some poorer students from dropping out.

"We were trying to upgrade the academic status," he said, "but it just didn't work that way. All we would do is chase kids out of school."

Head football coach Yogi Behrens said the policy wording was important and could affect next season's football team, since several players might be passing three required subjects but be failing one.

After discussing the matter further, the board decided Monday night to go back to the original policy, which will allow students who are passing in three required subjects to take part in extracurricular activities.

In other business Monday, board Chairman Jim Campbell awarded an engraved plaque to retiring teacher Rosemary Lawton for her 27 years of service at Wendell Elementary School.

Hagerman board wants to auction off 'older stuff'

HAGERMAN — An auction to sell a variety of old or unused items is being planned in Hagerman.

At its regular meeting Monday, the Hagerman school board decided to "get rid of the older stuff," by auctioning it in July or August. No date was set.

According to Superintendent Ken Black, a freezer, a belt sander, old desks and "not a whole lot of anything in particular" will be sold.

Benefit scheduled for Glenns Ferry ambulance service

GLENNS FERRY — A benefit for the Glenns Ferry ambulance service will be held July 4 at Hull Memorial Park in conjuction with other Independence Day events scheduled that day.

A number of items will be raffled to help raise funds for a two-way radio, which will allow ambulance personnel to stay in contact with both the hospital and the dispatcher.

Tickets for the raffle may be obtained at the Idaho Power office in Glenns Ferry. Anyone wishing to donate items to the raffle should call at 366-2380.

The event originally had been scheduled for June 29.

Rodgers

It was in his first year of high school that Rodgers started farming 15 acres, which he rented from his father. Over the years, his leased land increased to 160 acres, on which he has grown wheat, feed barley, sweet corn for Green Giant and malt barley for Coors.

Each growing season, Rodgers paid his father by the acre to plow, plant, corrugate and combine his crops.

The younger Rodgers would roller harrow the land, spray for weeds, irrigate and handle some hauling of grain.

His farm responsibilities required that Rodgers be an early riser. Every morning, he moved the sprinklers, fed the cattle and set the water for irrigating. In the evening, he checked the irrigation system and any dams that might have washed out.

The profits he realized at the end of each year were re-invested in the project.

"Only one person did it look like the enterprising young man might go into the red."

"I came close in my second year because my barley got hailed on," he says.

Although Rodgers attended agriculture classes throughout high school, he says he learned farming "mostly from my dad."

Growing up on a farm, Rodgers says his knowledge about crops and animals was derived from observation of his father's farming operations.

"Every once in a while, when you're doing something in the field, he'll tell you how to do it. He's sure to tell you if you do something wrong."

A lot of parents urge their kids to succeed, but "in the case with Mike, he has taken the responsibility," Kinyon says.

"We gave him the incentive," Rodgers' father agrees, "but he had the ambition."

Now that he's a high-school graduate, Rodgers hopes to find success in a new field as a criminal lawyer.

In August, he will enter the University of Idaho on a scholarship to major in political science.

"I got pretty good grades" in high school, Rodgers says modestly for a student with a 3.8 grade-point average.

"I don't think I was really cut out to be a farmer," he says. "I can think of better things to do," and "politics really interests me."

Rodgers' interest in law was stimulated by a work-study program in which he participated during his senior year.

Half of the semester, Rodgers worked for the Twin Falls law firm of Coleman & McIntyre, researching legal cases on water law. The other half, he observed interviews and attended court proceedings, under the guidance of the county's public defender's office.

"I could just sit in court all day," he says. "I'd rather do that than set water."

"I never became totally anti-farming," he says. "I just want to do something more with my mind."

As a knowledgeable observer of the young farmer's potential, Allred says he has mixed feelings about Rodgers choosing law instead of agriculture as his vocation.

It takes "intelligence to do what he does," Allred says. "You can't be any dummy and be successful at it (farming)."

But Allred wishes Rodgers the best in whatever he pursues in life. "He might be able to use his law in agriculture," he says.

Rodgers' father also may feel just a twinge of disappointment that his youngest son will not be following in the footsteps of his three older children who farm.

"My dad hoped I'd be a farmer," he says. "But I think he's not too unhappy about it."

"I was surprised and I was a little bit concerned" when he decided not to continue farming, Mr. Rodgers says.

"I'd have liked to have seen him stay" because inheriting land through the generations is the only way kids can afford to farm.

But then, Mike has "always been rather smart," his father says. "And if he wants to go and be a lawyer, that's his business.

153 begin Open quest amid beauty, history

PEBBLE BEACH, Calif. (UPI) — Against a backdrop of rugged beauty and on a course that echoes the beginnings of the sport, 153 competitors will begin their quest today for the most important title in golf — the U.S. Open Championship.

Weather that might be expected for the British Open — gloomy, chilly and sometimes foggy — dominated the scenic surroundings at the Pebble Beach golf links during practice rounds Wednesday and more of the same was forecast for today's opening round.

Amateur Brian Fogt of Dayton, Ohio, will hit the first ball today at 8 a.m. MDT, fog permitting, and the last threesome is not expected to work its way around the 6,825-yard, par-72 layout until just before dark.

All of the game's best will walk the cliffs and wind their way around the cypress trees, but the favorite's role has once again fallen on Jack Nicklaus — a winner of four U.S. Opens, one of them on this course in 1972.

A win this week would make Nicklaus the only man in history to win five Opens. He shares the record of four with Willie Anderson, Bobby Jones and Ben Hogan.

Nicklaus, who geared his game for this tournament, has played well all week and on Tuesday made an eagle three at the famed 18th hole, reaching the green in two with an iron and then rolling in a 25-foot putt.

But Nicklaus will be challenged by a number of golfers who are playing well — leading money winner Craig Stadler, Memorial and Memphis Open champ Ray Floyd and former Open winner Jerry Pate.

Tom Watson will be trying for his first Open crown, as will such talented stars as Bruce Lietzke, Bill Rogers, Tom Kite and Ben Crenshaw, who, despite being mired in a slump, is touted as a likely contender this week because of his good track record at Pebble Beach.

No matter who comes to the top in this championship, the tournament will reek of atmosphere and tradition.

Perhaps no other course in the United States looks so much like it has been plucked from the birthplace of golf.

"You stand on the 17th tee and you think your are in Scotland," said Watson, referring to the 209-yard, par-3 demon with its green sitting next to the ocean. "All you can see is a green surrounded by sand and tall grass. And in the background is the gray sky and sea.

"I can think of a lot of holes in Scotland and England that look just like that.

"I think you could take a poll of every player here, asking them to name their five favorite courses in the world, and Pebble Beach would be on almost every list.

"All the holes out here are great. On every hole there are places that say to you, 'you can't hit it here.'"

Despite the potential disaster that lurks around ever corner of the course, the lack of severe rough, the comparatively wide fairways and the thus far benign weather leads some of the players to think that scores this week could be low.

"I think it might take six-under-par (282) to win," said Watson.

That would be eight shots lower than the score turned in by Nicklaus when he won the Open crown here 10 years ago.

"I have no idea what will win," said Floyd. "But I would think even par would still be a heck of a score."

But no matter if birdies are available at Pebble Beach, the potential danger and the major championship nervousness which sets in among the more inexperienced players should combine to produce some large numbers.

"I've played in this tournament a lot of years," said Watson. "And when I step on the first tee I still get nervous. That's what the Open will do to you."

Cowboys sweep Russets

TWIN FALLS — A near no-hitter and a dropped fly ball kept the suspense up as the Twin Falls Cowboys swept a double-header from Idaho Falls Wednesday night.

Right-hander Steve Kravitz had his no-hit bid in the opener foiled when Eric Freitas jumped on a hanging curve for a double in the sixth inning. Kravitz took the victory 2-1.

In the nightcap, a dropped fly ball in leftfield opened the gates for three Idaho Falls runs but reliever Brock Miller came on to nail down a 5-4 victory for young Nate Burke. Brett Semple provided the margin of victory when he drilled a three-run homer to highlight a five-run first inning for the Cowboys.

The Cowboys leave on a long weekend Friday, playing double-headers at Caldwell Friday night, Nampa Saturday evening and Meridian Sunday afternoon.

"You'd better all show up," Coach Bill Ingram told his players "because you're all probably going to pitch."

Twin Falls didn't exactly punish Idaho Falls for the opening win. Lead-off batter Greg Kravitz was hit by a pitch, moved up on a ground out, to third on a wild pitch and scored on a passed ball.

The decisive run, coming in the second, started on a hit by Virgil Hurt who eventually scored after three consecutive walks.

Kravitz lost his shutout before the no-hitter. Freitas lived on an error starting off the fourth inning, winding up on second base. He took third on a wild pitch and scored on Doug Gourley's sacrifice fly.

Freitas' double came with one out in the sixth inning and Kravitz was worried about the pitch from the time it left his hand.

"I let it go up here," he said miming the motion, "and came off it a little. It didn't break down much. It was a good pitch for him to hit."

Did Kravitz know he was working on a no-hitter?

"It's a cardinal sin not to think about it," he answered with a smile.

Two young lefthanders hooked up for the second game but Idaho Falls' Todd Hanan wasn't around long.

The Cowboys unlimbered their bats with a succession of hits and Hanan added to his misery by walking three and committing an error.

But he also picked off Corky Federico after the Cowboy had started the game with a single and that held down production. Shawn Humberger kept it going with a single and Oscar Salinas drew a walk.

Dave Slotten plated the first run with a single and Semple then crashed his homer to leftfield. Three walks and an error gave Twin Falls its fifth-and-decisive run.

After that Idaho Falls reliever Kendall Bennett silenced Twin Falls but for four innings Burke was equally effective. Burke got defensive help when Slotten made two good plays at third.

But Idaho Falls broke the shutout in the fifth when Bennett doubled and scored on a Tony Duncan single. In the sixth, Burke got the first two men easily, walked the third and then enduced Jeff Adamson to hit a fly to leftfield. It was dropped and immediately Idaho Falls started moving up.

Freitas singled in a run and a wild pitch plated another before Miller came on, with runners at first and third, to retire the side.

Lease agreement near completion says negotiator

Raiders' move appears certain

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — The Oakland Raiders will play in Los Angeles in 1982 under an agreement team owner Al Davis should reach with the Coliseum Commission by the end of the week, a negotiator predicted Wednesday.

Bill Robertson, one of three members of the group's negotiating team, told reporters there is "nothing I can see out there" to prevent the Raiders from quickly making the move approved by a federal court jury last month.

"My feeling now is both parties want to see this happen and we're going to make it happen," Robertson said. "Nothing is simple. There are a lot of points that have to be dealt with.

"But I'm confident and my two associates share in that optimism."

Robertson said talks with Davis center on how to finance the transfer and improvements at the Coliseum, which was left without a pro team in 1980 when the Los Angeles Rams moved to suburban Anaheim.

"Hopefully, we'll reach an understanding by the end of the week," said Robertson. "I think the structure of the financial agreement is doable. We'll have it by the end of the week."

Davis won a key victory in his bid to move the Raiders Monday when U.S. District Court Judge Harry Pregerson refused an NFL request to delay the transfer pending appeal of the jury's decision that the league rule forcing him to gain approval of fellow owners violated federal antitrust laws.

Robertson disclosed few specifics of negotiations that began Tuesday, but said the panel is seeking a lengthy lease from Davis in exchange for costly improvements at the Coliseum, which will be the main site for the 1984 Olympics.

"Our priority now is getting the things together to be done for the 1982 season," Robertson said, "but that's a part of the whole package."

The Coliseum's original agreement with Davis, scuttled by the prolonged fight over the transfer, provided $10 million for improvements including construction of luxury boxes at the stadium, up to $5 million for relocation costs and $2 million for a practice field.

But he said those costs "are a negotiable item, nothing is set in concrete."

Davis inspected proposed practice sites Wednesday while commission members consulted with bankers and other possible financiers, Robertson added.

He said financing will come from private sources, and insisted, "Any package we come to, we're not asking for a dime from the taxpayers."

Robertson said Davis is pleased with the proposed improvements at the Coliseum, including air conditioning in the lockerrooms, a new scoreboard and an improved playing surface and drainage system. Some of the changes will be financed by the Olympics.

He said the city of Oakland "has been working" on Davis to persuade him to stay in the Bay Area and although the overtures seem "serious," he is convinced Davis "wants to come to Los Angeles, definitely."

Robertson said the switchboard at the Raiders' temporary offices in Los Angeles have been "swamped" with requests for luxury suites and season tickets for the 1982 season, which begins with an home exhibition match Aug. 28.

CSI holding own in college rodeo

BOZEMAN, Mont. — College of Southern Idaho rodeo Coach Shawn Davis isn't making any predictions, but he's pleased with his team's performance so far at the College National Finals Rodeo.

Davis' contingent of five cowboys and two cowgirls held their own Wednesday night in the action at Montana State University.

"We're in the best shape (team-wise) since the year we finished second," Davis told The Times-News. "We're behind several teams that scored heavily in the first go-round, but if the kids do well, we can make up the points in the average and it'll be down to the finals."

Davis compared CSI's current position to 1980 when the men's squad took second place in the nation.

"We're the best off we've ever been except for that year," the coach said.

CSI's competitors saw little action Wednesday night.

Sterling Wines, first in the saddle bronc competition after the first go-round, recorded a 63 during Wednesday's second go-round and is second on average with a 62.5.

"Sterling's got a good chance to place high," Davis said. "He's just got to wait for the rest. His second go-round will be Thursday or Friday."

Mitzi DeBraga also saw action in the breakaway roping and accomplished the task in 4.6 seconds. She had a 3.4 effort in her first go-round and is in fourth place on average.

Todd Webb, fourth in the calf roping after one go-round, didn't have his second go-round before the newspaper's press deadline.

Detailed responses being compiled by league

Shot clock talk alive among Big Sky coaches — at least for now

By MARK SHENEFELT
United Press International

BOISE — Experimental use of a shot clock in Big Sky Conference basketball games next season — an idea declared all but dead only last month — is again being considered by league officials.

Conference Commissioner Ron Stephenson said Wednesday he has distributed a questionnaire on the shot clock to head basketball coaches at the league's eight member schools, hoping to get a solid, detailed response from all the coaches for the first time.

Stephenson said he decided to conduct the formal survey and renew discussion of the controversial issue because the coaches, at their May meeting in Boise, split 4-4 in a show of hands on whether the shot clock had merit.

Five coaches had answered the new questionnaire as of Tuesday, Stephenson said. Three strongly opposed the shot clock, one strongly favored it and the fifth slightly favored it, he said.

The commissioner said he anticipated the coaches will end up about evenly divided on the issue when the results are tallied. Lack of a consensus on the issue could throw the first decision on the shot clock over to the league's athletic directors.

Stephenson said there's still time for the league to adopt a shot clock for use in the 1982-83 season, although it appears the idea may not be popular enough to win approval this year.

And he said it's not unprecedented for the athletic directors to break new ground when the coaches disagree. He said the Sunbelt Conference's athletic directors went against the wishes of their coaches when they decided to begin experimenting with a shot clock several seasons ago.

The Big Sky coaches' survey results will be reviewed by conference athletic directors and presidents, and a vote on the shot clock might be taken at the officials' fall meeting, Stephenson said.

In the questionnaire, Stephenson also asked the coaches about their preferences for timing of the shot clock. They were given a choice of 30, 35, 40 and 45 seconds and whether the clock, if the league decides to use it, should be triggered when the ball is thrown in bounds or when the offensive team brings the ball across mid-court.

Even if the league proposes use of a shot clock next season, the NCAA may not approve, Stephenson said. He said he has heard talk that the NCAA may limit the number of conferences allowed to switch to the shot-clock format. Several conferences have voted to experiment with the clock in the wake of last season's controversy over slow-down games in many leagues.

Experimentation with a three-point field goal outside a 22-foot circle in the Big Sky next season has been all but assured. The coaches, athletic directors and presidents have approved the idea, and the conference is now waiting only for word of approval from the NCAA's basketball rules committee. Stephenson said the conference expects the committee will approve the three-pointer for the Big Sky.

Proponents of the three-point field goal and shot clock say they would stimulate fan interest by cutting down on "stallball" and adding spice to long-range shooting. Opponents, however, say college basketball has been successful in its current form and should not be tampered with.

It takes "intelligence to do what he does," Allred says. "You can't be any dummy and be successful at it (farming.)"

But Allred wishes Rodgers the best in whatever he pursues in life. "He might be able to use his law in agriculture," he says.

Rodgers' father also may feel just a twinge of disappointment that his youngest son will not be following in the footsteps of his three older children who farm.

"My dad hoped I'd be a farmer," he says. "But I think he's not too unhappy about it."

"I was surprised and I was a little bit concerned" when he decided not to continue farming, Mr. Rodgers says.

"I'd have liked to have seen him stay" because inheriting land through the generations is the only way kids can afford to farm.

But then, Mike has "always been rather smart," his father says. "And if he wants to go and be a lawyer, that's his business.

153 begin Open quest amid beauty, history

PEBBLE BEACH, Calif. (UPI) — Against a backdrop of rugged beauty and on a course that echoes the beginnings of the sport, 153 competitors will begin their quest today for the most important title in golf — the U.S. Open Championship.

Weather that might be expected for the British Open — gloomy, chilly and sometimes foggy — dominated the scenic surroundings at the Pebble Beach golf links during practice rounds Wednesday and more of the same was forecast for today's opening round.

Amateur Brian Fogt of Dayton, Ohio, will hit the first ball today at 8 a.m. MDT, fog permitting, and the last threesome is not expected to work its way around the 6,825-yard, par-72 layout until just before dark.

All of the game's best will walk the cliffs and wind their way around the cypress trees, but the favorite's role has once again fallen on Jack Nicklaus — a winner of four U.S. Opens, one of them on this course in 1972.

Related stories — D4

A win this week would make Nicklaus the only man in history to win five Opens. He shares the record of four with Willie Anderson, Bobby Jones and Ben Hogan.

Nicklaus, who geared his game for this tournament, has played well all week and on Tuesday made an eagle three at the famed 18th hole, reaching the green in two with an iron and then rolling in a 25-foot putt.

But Nicklaus will be challenged by a number of golfers who are playing well — leading money winner Craig Stadler, Memorial and Memphis Open champ Ray Floyd and former Open winner Jerry Pate.

Tom Watson will be trying for his first Open crown, as will such talented stars as Bruce Lietzke, Bill Rogers, Tom Kite and Ben Crenshaw, who, despite being mired in a slump, is touted as a likely contender this week because of his good track record at Pebble Beach.

No matter who comes to the top in this championship, the tournament will reek of atmosphere and tradition.

Perhaps no other course in the United States looks so much like it has been plucked from the birthplace of golf.

"You stand on the 17th tee and you think your are in Scotland," said Watson, referring to the 209-yard, par-3 demon with its green sitting next to the ocean. "All you can see is a green surrounded by sand and tall grass. And in the background is the gray sky and sea.

"I can think of a lot of holes in Scotland and England that look just like that.

"I think you could take a poll of every player here, asking them to name their five favorite courses in the world, and Pebble Beach would be on almost every list.

"All the holes out here are great. On every hole there are places that say to you, 'you can't hit it here.'"

Despite the potential disaster that lurks around ever corner of the course, the lack of severe rough, the comparatively wide fairways and the thus far benign weather leads some of the players to think that scores this week could be low.

"I think it might take six-under-par (282) to win," said Watson.

That would be eight shots lower than the score turned in by Nicklaus when he won the Open crown here 10 years ago.

"I have no idea what will win," said Floyd. "But I would think even par would still be a heck of a score."

But no matter if birdies are available at Pebble Beach, the potential danger and the major championship nervousness which sets in among the more inexperienced players should combine to produce some large numbers.

"I've played in this tournament a lot of years," said Watson. "And when I step on the first tee I still get nervous. That's what the Open will do to you."

Cowboys sweep Russets

TWIN FALLS — A near no-hitter and a dropped fly ball kept the suspense up as the Twin Falls Cowboys swept a double-header from Idaho Falls Wednesday night.

Right-hander Steve Kravitz had his no-hit bid in the opener foiled when Eric Freitas jumped on a hanging curve for a double in the sixth inning. Kravitz took the victory 2-1.

In the nightcap, a dropped fly ball in leftfield opened the gates for three Idaho Falls runs but reliever Brock Miller came on to nail down a 5-4 victory for young Nate Burke. Brett Semple provided the margin of victory when he drilled a three-run homer to highlight a five-run first inning for the Cowboys.

The Cowboys leave on a long weekend Friday, playing double-headers at Caldwell Friday night, Nampa Saturday evening and Meridian Sunday afternoon.

"You'd better all show up," Coach Bill Ingram told his players "because you're all probably going to pitch."

Twin Falls didn't exactly punish Idaho Falls for the opening win. Lead-off batter Greg Kravitz was hit by a pitch, moved up on a ground out, to third on a wild pitch and scored on a passed ball.

The decisive run, coming in the second, started on a hit by Virgil Hurt who eventually scored after three consecutive walks.

Kravitz lost his shutout before the no-hitter. Freitas lived on an error starting off the fourth inning, winding up on second base. He took third on a wild pitch and scored on Doug Gourley's sacrifice fly.

Freitas' double came with one out in the sixth inning and Kravitz was worried about the pitch from the time it left his hand.

"I let it go up here," he said miming the motion, "and came off it a little. It didn't break down much. It was a good pitch for him to hit."

Did Kravitz know he was working on a no-hitter?

"It's a cardinal sin not to think about it," he answered with a smile.

Two young lefthanders hooked up for the second game but Idaho Falls' Todd Hanan wasn't around long.

The Cowboys unlimbered their bats with a succession of hits and Hanan added to his misery by walking three and committing an error.

But he also picked off Corky Federico after the Cowboy had started the game with a single and that held down production. Shawn Humberger kept it going with a single and Oscar Salinas drew a walk.

Dave Slotten plated the first run with a single and Semple then crashed his homer to leftfield. Three walks and an error gave Twin Falls its fifth and decisive run.

After that Idaho Falls reliever Kendall Bennett silenced Twin Falls but for four innings Burke was equally effective. Burke got defensive help when Slotten made two good plays at third.

But Idaho Falls broke the shutout in the fifth when Bennett doubled and scored on a Tony Duncan single. In the sixth, Burke got the first two men easily, walked the third and then enduced Jeff Adamson to hit a fly to leftfield. It was dropped and immediately Idaho Falls started moving up.

Freitas singled in a run and a wild pitch plated another before Miller came on, with runners at first and third, to retire the side.

Lease agreement near completion says negotiator

Raiders' move appears certain

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — The Oakland Raiders will play in Los Angeles in 1982 under an agreement team owner Al Davis should reach with the Coliseum Commission by the end of the week, a negotiator predicted Wednesday.

Bill Robertson, one of three members of the group's negotiating team, told reporters there is "nothing I can see out there" to prevent the Raiders from quickly making the move approved by a federal court jury last month.

"My feeling now is both parties want to see this happen and we're going to make it happen," Robertson said. "Nothing is simple. There are a lot of points that have to be dealt with.

"But I'm confident and my two associates share in that optimism."

Robertson said talks with Davis center on how to finance the transfer and improvements at the Coliseum, which was left without a pro team in 1980 when the Los Angeles Rams moved to suburban Anaheim.

"Hopefully, we'll reach an understanding by the end of the week," said Robertson. "I think the structure of the financial agreement is doable. We'll have it by the end of the week."

Davis won a key victory in his bid to move the Raiders Monday when U.S. District Court Judge Harry Pregerson refused an NFL request to delay the transfer pending appeal of the jury's decision that the league rule forcing him to gain approval of fellow owners violated federal antitrust laws.

Robertson disclosed few specifics of negotiations that began Tuesday, but said the panel is seeking a lengthy lease from Davis in exchange for costly improvements at the Coliseum, which will be the main site for the 1984 Olympics.

"Our priority now is getting the things together to be done for the 1982 season," Robertson said, "but that's a part of the whole package."

The Coliseum's original agreement with Davis, scuttled by the prolonged fight over the transfer, provided $10 million for improvements including construction of luxury boxes at the stadium, up to $5 million for relocation costs and $2 million for a practice field.

But he said those costs "are a negotiable item, nothing is set in concrete."

Davis inspected proposed practice sites Wednesday while commission members consulted with bankers and other possible financiers, Robertson added.

He said financing will come from private sources, and insisted, "Any package we come to, we're not asking for a dime from the taxpayers."

Robertson said Davis is pleased with the proposed improvements at the Coliseum, including air conditioning in the locker rooms, a new scoreboard and an improved playing surface and drainage system. Some of the changes will be financed by the Olympics.

He said the city of Oakland "has been working" on Davis to persuade him to stay in the Bay Area and although the overtures seem "serious," he is convinced Davis "wants to come to Los Angeles, definitely."

Robertson said the switchboard at the Raiders' temporary offices in Los Angeles have been "swamped" with requests for luxury suites and season tickets for the 1982 season, which begins with an home exhibition match Aug. 28.

CSI holding own in college rodeo

BOZEMAN, Mont. — College of Southern Idaho rodeo Coach Shawn Davis isn't making any predictions, but he's pleased with his team's performance so far at the College National Finals Rodeo.

Davis' contingent of five cowboys and two cowgirls held their own Wednesday night in the action at Montana State University.

"We're in the best shape (team-wise) since the year we finished second," Davis told The Times-News. "We're behind several teams that scored heavily in the first go-round, but if the kids do well, we can make up the points in the average and it'll be down to the finals."

Davis compared CSI's current position to 1980 when the men's squad took second place in the nation.

"We're the best off we've ever been except for that year," the coach said.

CSI's competitors saw little action Wednesday night.

Sterling Wines, first in the saddle bronc competition after the first go-round, recorded a 63 during Wednesday's second go-round and is second on average with a 62.5.

"Sterling's got a good chance to place high," Davis said. "He's just got to wait for the rest. His second go-round will be Thursday or Friday."

Mitzi DeBraga also saw action in the breakaway roping and accomplished the task in 4.6 seconds. She had a 3.4 effort in her first go-round and is in fourth place on average.

Todd Webb, fourth in the calf roping after one go-round, didn't have his second go-round before the newspaper's press deadline.

Detailed responses being compiled by league

Shot clock talk alive among Big Sky coaches — at least for now

By MARK SHENEFELT
United Press International

BOISE — Experimental use of a shot clock in Big Sky Conference basketball games next season — an idea declared all but dead only last month — is again being considered by league officials.

Conference Commissioner Ron Stephenson said Wednesday he has distributed a questionnaire on the shot clock to head basketball coaches at the league's eight member schools, hoping to get a solid, detailed response from all the coaches for the first time.

Stephenson said he decided to conduct the formal survey and renew discussion of the controversial issue because the coaches, at their May meeting in Boise, split 4-4 in a show of hands on whether the shot clock had merit.

Five coaches had answered the new questionnaire as of Tuesday, Stephenson said. Three strongly opposed the shot clock, one strongly favored it and the fifth slightly favored it, he said.

The commissioner said he anticipated the coaches will end up about evenly divided on the issue when the results are tallied. Lack of a consensus on the issue could throw the first decision on the shot clock over to the league's athletic directors.

Stephenson said there's still time for the league to adopt a shot clock for use in the 1982-83 season, although it appears the idea may not be popular enough to win approval this year.

And he said it's not unprecedented for the athletic directors to break new ground when the coaches disagree. He said the Sunbelt Conference's athletic directors went against the wishes of their coaches when they decided to begin experimenting with a shot clock several seasons ago.

The Big Sky coaches' survey results will be reviewed by conference athletic directors and presidents, and a vote on the shot clock might be taken at the officials' fall meeting, Stephenson said.

In the questionnaire, Stephenson also asked the coaches about their preferences for timing of the shot clock. They were given a choice of 30, 35, 40 and 45 seconds and whether the clock, if the league decides to use it, should be triggered when the ball is thrown in bounds or when the offensive team brings the ball across mid-court.

Even if the league proposes use of a shot clock next season, the NCAA may not approve, Stephenson said. He said he has heard talk that the NCAA may limit the number of conferences allowed to switch to the shot-clock format. Several conferences have voted to experiment with the clock in the wake of last season's controversy over slow-down games in many leagues.

Experimentation with a three-point field goal outside a 22-foot circle in the Big Sky next season has been all but assured. The coaches, athletic directors and presidents have approved the idea, and the conference is now waiting only for word of approval from the NCAA's basketball rules committee. Stephenson said the conference expects the committee will approve the three-pointer for the Big Sky.

Proponents of the three-point field goal and shot clock say they would stimulate fan interest by cutting down on "stallball" and adding spice to long-range shooting. Opponents, however, say college basketball has been successful in its current form and should not be tampered with.

Lowly Twins stop loss skid; Yanks end sweep of Boston

By United Press International

American

Tom Brunansky cracked a two-run homer and Kent Hrbek doubled home two runs to help the Minnesota Twins snap a four-game losing streak with a 5-2 victory Wednesday night over the Kansas City Royals, earning rookie Frank Viola his first major-league win.

Viola, 1-0, a second-round pick by the Twins in the June 1981 free agent draft, scattered five hits, walked one and struck out four in seven innings. Ron Davis pitched one-hit, one-run ball the rest of the way.

Orioles 2, Brewers 2

At Baltimore, Milwaukee tied the score at 2-2 when Robin Yount led off the sixth with his ninth home run and third off Oriole pitching this season. Joe Nolan singled across a pair of Baltimore runs in the third inning after Brewer catcher Ted Simmons lost track of the outs.

Yankees 4, Red Sox 1 (6)

At New York, Ken Griffey drove in two runs and belted his second homer in as many nights and Dave Righetti scattered three hits despite a bout with wildness for the Yankees. The game was halted for the second time following the sixth inning and the umpires waited 61 minutes before calling the game. The game was delayed for 46 minutes in the second.

Griffey said things have been different for him since he has found his health.

"I was having fun then," he said of the time when he was playing with various leg injuries, "but things weren't falling for me. They are now."

Boston Manager Ralph Houk felt the three-game sweep by New York was not a crucial setback.

"We ran into a lot of good pitching," he said. "We were in every game and we played better ball than they did."

Angels 7, Blue Jays 1

At Anaheim, Calif., Steve Renko overcame a shaky first inning and Don Baylor and Doug DeCinces homered to help the Angels snap an eight-game home losing streak.

The 37-year-old Renko, 6-1, gave up three consecutive hits to open the game before settling down to hold the Blue Jays to just three singles for the remaining eight innings. He struck out five and walked four.

Mariners 7, Rangers 2

At Seattle, Gaylord Perry registered his 302nd career victory and Julio Cruz hit a three-run homer put the Mariners past the Rangers.

The 43-year-old Perry walked one and struck out three in 7 1-3 innings to even his record at 5-5. Bill Caudill went the rest of the way to record his ninth save. Charlie Hough, 5-4, suffered the loss and aided his own demise with six walks in 4 2-3 innings.

Cedeno displays production Cincinnati was looking for

By United Press International

National

Cesar Cedeno registered the kind of performance that Cincinnati was hoping for when the Reds swung an off-season deal.

Cedeno belted two home runs and a triple to drive in six runs Wednesday night and Mario Soto regained the major-league strikeout lead in giving the Reds a 7-3 victory over the San Francisco Giants.

Cedeno, acquired from Houston for third baseman Ray Knight, walked with the based loaded to force home a first-inning run; hit a two-run homer in the third and hammered a three-run homer in the fifth. Both homers came off loser Jim Barr, 1-2.

"I'm not a home-run hitter. I just got lucky," said Cedeno "It was one of those nights," he added. "I just got the pitches I was looking for."

Cubs 7, Phillies 6 (11)

At Chicago, Ryne Sandberg singled home Jody Davis with the winning run in the 11th to give the Cubs their third consecutive victory after a 13-game losing streak. With one out, Davis doubled and went to third on a single by Larry Bowa. Sandberg smacked a grounder up the middle off reliever Warren Brusstar, 2-3. Dick Tidrow, 2-1, pitched one inning and earned the victory.

Braves 5, Astros 4 (10)

At Houston, Chris Chambliss hit a solo homer with one out in the 10th inning to power the Braves comeback. Chambliss drove a 2-2 pitch from loser George Cappuzzello, 0-1, into the right field seats to make a winner of Gene Garber, 5-2, who pitched the final two innings. The Braves tied it in the ninth on Bob Watson's RBI single, the third straight two-out hit by the Braves.

Expos 8, Cardinals 3

At St. Louis, Andre Dawson's bases-loaded double capped a five-run inning to carry the Expos. The Expos, who had lost the first two games of the series, sent 10 batters to the plate in the second, knocking out Dave LaPoint, 3-1, who suffered the first loss of his major-league career after five victories.

Dodgers 6, Padres 0

At San Diego, Pedro Guerrero drove in three runs and Bob Welch pitched a three-hitter for his third shutout of the season, enabling the Dodgers to complete a sweep of their three-game series with the Padres.

Packers ask support for legislation

GREEN BAY, Wis. (UPI) — Robert J. Parins, the recently appointed president of the Green Bay Packers, is asking for local and state backing of pending legislation that would ensure preservation of the NFL's revenue sharing plan.

In a letter this week to Brown County Executive Donald Holloway, Parins asked for help in aligning the County Board behind the Major League Sports Community Protection Act of 1982.

The bill is currently pending in Congress.

Parins said in Monday's letter he has urged Reps. Robert Kastenmeier, D-Wis., and F. James Sensenbrenner, Jr., R-Wis., to join in sponsoring of the bill. Kastenmeier and Sensenbrenner are members of the House Judiciary Committee.

"I think the bill has got substantial merit because it's right," Parins told the Green Bay News-Chronicle. "The bill is right. It's logical. It makes sense.

"The most important aspect of the bill is the provision which affirms the policy of the league authorizing revenue sharing," Parins said.

The NFL's revenue sharing plan gives all 28 teams an equal share of league revenues. Under the concept, Green Bay, the smallest city in the league, receives the same share as either New York franchise.

The same concept applies to the league's new television contract, estimated at $2 billion for five years. Based on those figures, each team will receive $14 million per annum in television revenues.

Under a more competitive situation, each franchise would have to fend for itself with teams in smaller television markets at a disadvantage.

The proposed bill would also make relocation of a franchise more difficult, potentially beneficial to the Packers who are Wisconsin's only professional football team.

Big inning gives Budweiser enough for win

TWIN FALLS — Budweiser Light scored 10 runs before registering an out and hung on to topple Al's Tires-Donnelley's Sporting Goods 10-6 in slowpitch play Wednesday night.

In other C League action, Sherwood-Arctic Circle nipped Idaho Falls power 10-9, Idaho Frozen Foods turned back Pedersen's 4-2 and Elsing Drilling and Pump trimmed Seven-Eleven-Klover Klub 15-2.

Feldtman used a wedge for the first hole-in-one of her career. The shot was witnessed by her husband, Steve Feldtman.

Deal for Denver Nuggets may collapse

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (UPI) — Citing a possible "major roadblock in negotiations, Red McCombs said Wednesday there is a "50-50 chance" his deal to buy the Denver Nuggets will fall through.

"We at the present time have a very complex deal that is virtually done, except for a complication that involves rental of a facility," he said.

"We do possibly have a major roadblock in this area," McCombs told a news conference.

The automobile magnate explained that a misunderstanding about the lease of McNichols Sports Arena in Denver could leave him no choice but to back out of the purchase, which has been estimated at $10 million. The Nuggets have unpaid bills from last season on rental of the arena.

"The difference I'm talking about is $3 million," McComb said.

He said he and Denver Mayor Bill McNichols will meet today in an attempt to iron out their differences.

Tessier named Black Hawks' coach

CHICAGO (UPI) — The Chicago Black Hawks reached deep into their farm system Wednesday and selected Orval Tessier as their new head coach, hoping he can bring back "the glory days of the 1960s."

Hawks general manager Bob Pulford, who stepped down as acting coach, referred to Tessier as the "one person in our system" who has consistently shown he understands the game and knows how to treat players.

"We have selected a man who will bring to the Hawks the glory days of the 1960s when the team won a Stanley Cup and was a contender for several years," Black Hawks president William Wirtz said.

Tessier was signed to a multi-year contract.

Gridder earns workmen's compensation

INDIANAPOLIS (UPI) — An Indiana State University football player who was seriously injured in practice is entitled to workmen's compensation because he lost his athletic scholarship, the Indiana Court of Appeals ruled Wednesday.

The 2-1 ruling reversed a decision of the Industrial Board to deny workmen's benefits to Fred Rensing, who became a quadriplegic after being injured during varsity football practice at the Terre Haute campus in 1976.

At issue was whether Rensing's scholarship created an employer-employee contract between Rensing and the university's board of trustees.

The opinion said Rensing's injury occurred when he tackled a teammate in a punting drill during spring practice. The fractured dislocation of his cervical spine rendered Rensing 95-100 percent disabled, according to medical testimony.

At the time of the injury, Rensing was receiving financial aid through a football scholarship awarded by the school trustees. The terms of the scholarship included a clause requiring him to assist in other tasks, such as player recruitment, if he could not play football.

In 1977, Rensing filed a claim with the Industrial Board seeking recovery for permanent total disability as well as medical and hospital expenses.

His claim was rejected on May 24, 1979. The board ruled an employer-employee relationship did not exist between Rensing and the trustees and he was not entitled to workmen's compensation.

The 4th District of the Court of Appeals overturned the board's decision, ruling Rensing's relationship with the board of trustees was tantamount to an employee-employer relationship.

Astros' Richard seeks Triple A berth

HOUSTON (UPI) — Pitcher J.R. Richard, who suffered a stroke in 1980, said he is ready to move up to the Houston Astros' top minor league team from an instructional league.

He was to meet with Astros General Manager Al Rosen and Dr. William Field Wednesday. Rosen would not comment on what action he might take.

Richard, 30, is a former all-star pitcher who was partially paralyzed on the left side as the result of a July, 1980, stroke. He has worked since then to return to the major leagues but has not pitched in a game in the minors or majors.

Cribbs says he didn't demand $1 million

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (UPI) — Buffalo Bills All-Pro running back Joe Cribbs, locked in a contract dispute with the National Football League team, says he has never demanded a $1 million a year contract.

"We never asked for a million dollars," Cribbs said in an interview published Wednesday in The Montgomery Advertiser. "Buffalo leaked that out, not us. I guess that is what they expect us to ask for."

The former Auburn star has threatened to sit out the next season unless his contract is renegotiated.

Cribbs declined to say how much he earns now but it is reportedly about $100,000 a year.

Kimberly's Mark McKinlay, first in the bareback after one go-round with a 67, dropped down to fourth in Tuesday's slack competition and will have his second go-round tonight.

Lisa Butler hadn't run her second set of barrels Wednesday night, but was in fifth place after the first go-round.

Among the leaders, Sabrina Pike of Southeastern Oklahoma State moved into the all-around lead in the women's competition Wednesday night.

Pike is sitting first in breakaway roping, third in barrel racing and seventh in goat tying. Cheryl Overfelt of Southern Colorado dropped from her first-round lead into second place in the all-around race. Edee Cowart of Southeastern Oklahoma State moved into third.

Pike's and Cowart's performances strengthened Southeastern Oklahoma State's lead in the women's standings as the second go-round continued.

No team points were available Wednesday night because of late slack action.

Sul Ross State was second in women's competition. Next were Arizona, New Mexico Junior College, Black Hills State, Southern Colorado, Utah State, Panhandle State, Wyoming and Central Arizona.

Lori McNeill of Utah State ran the barrels in 14.47 seconds Wednesday night to take over the barrel racing lead with 29.31 on two head.

Pike continued to hold onto the breakaway roping lead she snared Tuesday. Linda Kay O'Neal of Arizona was still tops in goat tying.

Men's competition continued late Wednesday, and team standings were not available.

Former Broncos boss to coach Denver Gold

DENVER (UPI) — Robert "Red" Miller, the former NFL coach who led the Denver Broncos to the 1978 Super Bowl, returned to professional football Wednesday as head coach of Denver's entry in the new United States Football League.

Miller, 53, said he was attracted to his new job by "the idea that I could stay in Denver and coach football, and the challenge of getting in on something new and growing with it.

"It was not the money," he added.

Ron Blanding, owner of the USFL franchise, announced the selection of Miller at a news conference where he also revealed the name of the new team — the Denver Gold — and the team colors — black and gold.

Blanding said two others, former Broncos' coach Lou Saban and an unnamed college coach, had been considered for the new USFL coaching position.

Saban, who coached the Broncos from 1967 through 1971, is a close friend of Blanding and had reportedly been Blanding's first choice until concern rose over adverse public reaction.

"We just decided Red Miller should be our coach and we're happy with the decision we made," Blanding said. "We're happy to have Red. We're off and running."

Miller was fired from his position with the Broncos in March 1981 by new owner Edgar F. Kaiser Jr. He had coached the Broncos for four successful seasons ending in 1980.

Under Miller, the Broncos won their first American Football Conference championship in 1977 by defeating Oakland 20-17 and went to the 1978 Superbowl, where they lost to Dallas 27-10. During Miller's four seasons as coach, the Broncos compiled a 42-25 record.

Chuck Fairbanks, the former University of Colorado coach who became the first coach in the USFL when he was named to head the New York franchise earlier this month, attended today's news conference and called Miller "one of the great football coaches in the country."

Blanding said Denver Gold officials will now begin assembling a coaching staff and filling positions in player personnel and other areas. He said the team expects to play its spring games in Mile High Stadium, and the club is looking for a training facility.

Tough act to follow

Competing in Open with his famous father, Wayne Player tries to remain his own man

By JOE SARGIS
UPI sports writer

PEBBLE BEACH, Calif. — Wayne Player is trying hard to be his own man.

As the son of a famous golfer and one who aspires to be as good as his father, it isn't easy.

Today, Wayne, 20, will be competing in the 82nd U.S. Open golf championship for the first time.

For his father, Gary, it will be old hat.

Gary has won nine major championships, including the 1965 U.S. Open, and while he would like to win a few more before he turns the family fortunes over to his son, he is as much interested in what Wayne does as he is in his own game.

According to United States Golf Association officials, this is the first time a father and son have played in the same U.S. Open. But it is not the first time this has happened in a major. Three years ago, in the British Open, the two Players were in the same field.

"I know this for sure," said Gary, who has won the British Open three times. "This is the first time a father and son will have played in a British and American Open."

Wayne is an amateur who has yet to make his mark in the game he first took up eight years ago. But like all young golfers, he's optimistic and has set a goal for himself.

"I'd like to be the low amateur this week," he said. "That's a realistic goal for me."

Someone asked Wayne what he'd do if by some chance he found himself on the final hole Sunday needing a short putt to beat his father.

He thought that one over and finally replied, "I think I might put a jerk to it."

As might be expected, Wayne idolizes his father. In his mind, his father is the greatest golfer of all time, even greater than Jack Nicklaus.

"If it wasn't for my dad," he said, "I might not be as good a golfer as I am. Yes, he's been a pretty good teacher. I think he's the greatest golfer who has ever lived. I know Nicklaus has won 17 majors and two amateurs while my dad has won only nine majors.

"But no one realizes what difficulty my father has had to go through to be as good as he is. He's had to travel great distances to prove himself, and that always hasn't been easy."

Wayne said he hasn't patterned his game after anyone in particular although he sees similarities in his short game and his father's.

"I took my bunker play and short game from my father," he said.

"Wayne is longer and stronger off the tee than I am," said Gary. "I think his swing is good enough for him to turn professional but I don't think he should be in any hurry. There's a lot to be said about amateur golf."

Since the Open will be played at tough Pebble Beach, the elder Player was asked what advice he planned to give his son.

"Use the 5-wood," he said without hesitation.

Wayne was asked what advice he would give father.

"Don't be so mechanical," he replied with a sheepish grin.

Gary, of course, was among those exempt from the U.S. Open while Wayne had to qualify to win a spot in the 153-man field. He and four others were tied for the last four places in the first qualifying round. Wayne was late for the playoff and was disqualified.

"But I had the good fortune of one player withdrawing," he said, "and they gave me the spot."

In the second qualifying round, Wayne shot 68-67 to make the Open field.

Wager on dinner inspires Nicklaus

PEBBLE BEACH, Calif. (UPI) — The competitive fire burns so deep within Jack Nicklaus that while he has won more money in golf than anyone in history he can get psyched up to play his best even for a free dinner.

That happened a couple of days ago here as Nicklaus put the finishing touches on his preparation for the 82nd U.S. Open. He was playing a round with Tom Weiskopf and when the two reached the 18th hole, Weiskopf turned to Nicklaus and asked if he would like to bet a dinner on making an eagle.

Nicklaus said "you're on" and then hit the green on the hole in two and sank a 25-foot putt for the eagle.

"In all the years I have played at Pebble Beach," said Nicklaus, "I can't remember ever making an eagle on 18. But then, I've never played Weiskopf for dinner before."

Nicklaus, who has won almost $4 million in his long career, will be shooting for his fifth Open title, which would set a record. However, he insisted he is not approaching play this week with that in mind.

"I look at this tournament as the 1982 Open at Pebble Beach," he said. "If I win it then it will be my fifth Open title and my 20th major. I can only look at it that way."

Nicklaus said the U.S. Open is the most important of the four majors.

"I know this," he said, "It's the hardest by far, and that's because it is played on so many different courses. There is no set way you can prepare yourself for the Open."

Pebble Beach is Nicklaus' favorite golf course and he never fails to speak glowingly of the famous seaside course. He has won two amateurs, three Crosbys and the 1972 Open on the layout.

"I like the course," he said, "because it requires thinking. And if you don't play well on Pebble, you won't score."

Nicklaus said he thinks only 15 to 20 players in the 153-man field has a chance to win this week, and naturally, he put himself in that group.

"The way this course is playing now," he said, "not too many players have a chance to win even though I think the course is playing easier now than it did in the 1972 Open."

5,000 entered, but only the select few who handle pressure can win

By BILL LYON
Knight-Ridder Newspapers

PEBBLE BEACH, Calif. — Anyone can enter the U.S. Open; more than 5,000 did this year.

And almost anyone can qualify to play; this year's field totals 153.

But win it? Of those who will tee it up today on this gorgeous monster of a course, bathed in mist and myth, perhaps 50 have an outside shot, and probably fewer than 20 have expectations that can be described as reasonable.

The nature of the Open itself usually eliminates all but the proven, pressurized shot-makers. And this course, on the foam-sprayed bluffs of Carmel Bay, will either demoralize or hypnotize the other pretenders. There are no fluke winners at Pebble Beach.

The only other time the Open was held here, in 1972, the winner was one Jack William Nicklaus, whose score was a pedestrian two-over-par 290, but that was still a comfortable margin.

And Nicklaus is as good a place as any to start handicapping this year's field. He is familiar with Pebble and he plays it well. Of all the golf courses he has designed, built and mastered, he calls this one his favorite. He won the 1961 U.S. Amateur here; he won the '72 Open here; he has won three different Bing Crosby Pro-Ams here, and he was third in that event last February.

It is also about time for him to make yet another "resurrection." Periodically, he schleps along for several months without a victory and the obituaries are dusted off and then, properly aroused, he goes out and crushes everyone.

He ended a 21-month victory drought in May by winning the Colonial. He is back among the top 10 money winners for the year, which means his game is sound mechanically. But what about emotionally?

Well, everyone knows how he points toward the majors and how he has this keen sense of history and his place in it. And he will not be lacking motivation. His next Open will be his fifth and would elevate him to yet one more plateau, separating him from Ben Hogan, Bobby Jones and Willie Anderson, the only others ever to win four Opens.

Who else in this year's field? Craig Stadler, Tom Watson, Jerry Pate, Raymond Floyd and Tom Kite are all legitimate threats. Each is among the top money winners this year and each, except for Kite, has won at least one major tournament.

Stadler, The Walrus, has been on a roll all year. He won the Masters, although he gave away a six-shot lead on the back nine and needed one sudden-death hole to squeeze into the green jacket.

He will be bucking history, however, for in the last four decades only three golfers — Hogan, Nicklaus and Arnold Palmer — won the Masters and the Open in the same year. It is a tough, tough double.

The player who burns to win the Open, though he insists otherwise because such passion has cost him in the past, is Watson. He already has three British Opens and two Masters, but the closest he has come in a U.S. Open is third.

Cautions listed for controlled big game hunt applicants

BOISE — Shortly after Aug. 2, thousands of applicants for Idaho's controlled big game hunts will each be getting a Department of Fish and Game envelope with at least one permit inside.

Gloom settles in for others when they get only their refunds and realize they were among the unlucky ones.

But it's another envelope that can be the most disheartening, according to Claude Clapsaddle, the department's data processing manager. It's the envelope with a refund and a message explaining why the applicant was ineligible for the computerized drawing.

Last year, more than 5,700 applicants were ruled out — about half of them after the first visual edits and the remainder when the data processing system turned up errors, Clapsaddle said.

Failure to meet the mailing deadline, an invalid hunt number or an incorrect payment are common mistakes department employees find when they check envelopes and their contents.

Once in the computer, the application card must clear other edits before it can be entered in the drawing, Clapsaddle said. He urged each applicant to study the controlled hunt regulations and to take an extra look at:

• The application deadline. Applications must be received at the department's headquarters office no later than 5 p.m., June 30, or postmarked no later than June 30.

• Fees. The correct amount of money must accompany applications and only a cashier's check, money order or certified check will be accepted by mail. The amount can include fees for more than one species, but if it is less than the correct total, the applications and money will be returned.

• Restrictions. Only one application per species is allowed.

Other restrictions include: any person who has drawn a permit in the last two years cannot apply for the same species; any person who has harvested a moose in a controlled hunt cannot apply and a hunter who has taken a bighorn sheep since 1974 may not apply; anyone who applies for a sheep permit cannot apply for any other controlled hunt; any person who has harvested a mountain goat in 1978 or succeeding years cannot apply for a goat permit.

• Group applications. Two persons may apply for the same hunt, but the group application will go into the drawing, if eligible, as one chance. If the chance is successful, both hunters receive permits. Group applications are not accepted for moose and nonresidents cannot apply for the species.

• Application cards. Enter a correct hunt number for the appropriate species. Do not enter a game management unit number, which has only two digits.

Be sure to enter your valid, eight-digit hunting license number and your social security number.

Other lines on the application call for sex, age, height and weight, name (printed), a complete mailing address, telephone number and signature.

Successful resident applicants receive a permit and tag by mail for all species except deer and elk. The applicant who draws a permit for a deer or elk must purchase the tags from a vendor.

Permits and tags are mailed to successful nonresident applicants for antelope, bighorn sheep and mountain goat, but they must purchase deer and elk tags from the department.

There are nonresident quotas of 9,500 tags each for deer and elk. The nonresident elk tag quota includes 1,200 panhandle tags.

Great perch feed now on at Magic

Special to The Times-News

Ole partner and I spent Friday night and Saturday morning testing the water at Magic Reservoir. Not once did we set foot into a boat.

Over the years, an event more notable by the fish than by fisherman occurs in the spring. I'll call it the "great perch feed."

Probably a large percentage of the trout participate in this event, which consists of prowling the shores of the bays in search of one- to two-inch perch that have been hatched out about two to three weeks.

You need not be hit on the head to learn about this annual event. For many years even I found, and joined the "great perch feed."

I've even tried various areas over the years to find the best spot and have determined that Metcalf Springs north of the resorts will give you the best results while participating in this event.

This year, with high water and the willows still in the water around the springs, and the little bugs dropping from the water to provide feed for the little perch, and they in turn providing a feast for the larger trout, its a celebration that should be joined by float-tubers, boat drifters and just plain bank fishermen.

Swen's method of participation this year was to walk along the south shore of Metcalf Springs and poke my fly through the brush.

Your darn right it was a success! Probably the first time in 10 years where two fish were a length limit. The first fish I kept. It was 18 inches long, weighed about 2½ pounds and had 11 of the small perch in his craw.

I suggest that if you bait fish this area, you go without any weight. Usually the weight of your bait is enough to get you out to the feeding grounds. Usually not more than 15 feet out.

If you have a float tube, rubber raft or canoe, just keep out away from the shoreline about 20 to 40 feet and cast into the brush.

Various sizes and types of the larger flies were producing. But I can assume that cut bait or lures will produce just as well.

Metcalf Springs does not have a lot of parking room, nor a lot of fishing room. But is an ideal nursery for the small perch. And a great place to have the annual "great perch feed."

A little time was spent in the resorts talking to fishermen. Mixed success was their report. Most who trolled on top of the water with wooly worms claimed they were doing better than those who trolled deep.

The road to the west side of Magic isn't too bad. The water in the reservoir is murky, but not all that bad except in the Hot Springs landing area. There are many camped in the Biscuit Island area and some looked bedded down for the summer, so you may have to seek a camping area.

The two-fish legal limit will be your biggest disappointment, but if you like to catch and release, join the "great perch feed" going on now at Magic.

•

Spent some time at Mormon Reservoir over the weekend. It is high and clear. Float-tubers are taking some nice fish 10 to 14 inches long. Still too high for effective bank fishing. Too early for the perch to be biting. If you plan to bank fish, leave Mormon Reservoir alone until the last of this month.

•

My wife adds a note of warning. "I had eight ticks on my clothes after bucking the brush at Magic. Even had one show up on my neck Sunday evening after getting back home."

Always something to put a damper on good fishing.

Lunar rainbow

While this view of lower Yosemite Falls in Yosemite National Park appears to be sunlit, it actually was taken at night on June 6 under a full moon to record the lunar rainbow in the mist below the falls. Unlike a solar rainbow, a lunar rainbow is silvery or white in appearance. The exposure had to be 10 minutes in length for the film to adequately record the limited light.

Cooler temps could help pheasants

JEROME — While most people have been awaiting warmer weather, it hasn't been unanimous.

Idaho Department of Fish and Game biologists would've liked another week of slow growing weather to help ease a possible heavy sting in the area's pheasant populations.

Hard winter conditions had a heavy impact on the number of brood stock. The second major mortality cause for that species is the pheasant nesting coincides with the first cutting of hay. Dozens of hens are killed or crippled and uncounted hundreds of nests are abandoned when man removes the cover so quickly and efficiently.

Gary Will, department biologist, said it appears the haying season has been postponed at least a few days by the cooler weather.

"It's too early to tell. It looks like the cutting may be a few days late. If that's true, we'll save a few of the birds on the nest (who will bring off their broods and herd them to safety)," Will said.

"Last week I talked with some farmers in the Shoshone area and they were complaining that it had not been warm enough to get the alfalfa growing. But we've noticed that in the last day or two they've really been laying it (alfalfa) down."

Will said over the last five years the peak of haying has ranged from June 9 to June 17. If the peak is coming this week, it will put it at the longer end of the spectrum and perhaps increase total pheasant production.

Rewards wait for 17

BOISE — Citizens Against Poaching wants to hear from 17 callers who are eligible for rewards for their information that produced citations for fish and game law violations.

CAP directors recently established a cutoff date for rewards to be claimed. Starting June 1, a caller has six months to claim a reward from the time the citation is issued.

Sunday bicentennial for nation's symbol

LAUREL, Md. (UPI) — On June 20, 1782 Congress selected the American bald eagle as this country's national symbol, passing up Benjamin Franklin's suggestion that the honor be bestowed on the wild turkey instead.

But 200 years later, the bald eagle is just beginning to recover from the more dubious distinction of being an endangered species, federal wildlife experts say.

The gradual recovery of the bald eagle population is due in part to work at the 5,000-acre Patuxent Wildlife Research Center.

Bald eagle populations also have risen because of the government's 1972 ban on DDT — a pesticide which decimated the bird.

Since the ban, the bald eagle population in the lower 48 states has climbed to an estimated 4,500, about five times what it was in the late 1960s — but still far from tens of thousands believed to have soared over the skies of most of the country 200 years ago. The bird is not in serious danger in Alaska, where its numbers are estimated at from 35,000 to 50,000.

"I don't think we'll ever have the numbers we've once seen," James Carpenter, director of engangered species propogation at the Patuxent center, said Tuesday. "What is significant is that we're taking them to places like New Jersey, Tennessee and Georgia, where there are few if any breeding pairs."

"The birds are starting to recover from the effects of pesticides but habitat destruction will ultimately limit the recovery of eagle populations," added Gary Heinz, a research biologist at the center.

Still, Carpenter predicted that with the continuation of the captive breeding program and increased protection of the eagle's natural habitats, "We'll have a small but viable population where birds can start breeding on their own and restoring their own numbers" in eight to 10 years.

President Reagan, in proclaiming June 20 as "National Bald Eagle Day," said "As we approach the bicentennial anniversary ... we have an excellent opportunity to pause and reflect on the importance of the bald eagle, indeed of all our fish and wildlife resources, to a healthy America."

Algeria shocks West Germany; Spain survives

MADRID, Spain (UPI) — First-time qualifier Algeria celebrated the 20th anniversary of its independence by humbling mighty West Germany 2-1 Wednesday in the biggest upset in World Cup soccer history.

And another minnow nearly swallowed a whale on this fourth day of the 24-nation tournament. Honduras was heading for a surprise victory over Spain until the host-nation came back to tie the Group 5 match in Valencia at 1-1 on a questionable penalty kick which smacked of a hometown decision by Argentinian referee Arturo Ithurralde.

In other action Wednesday, England justified its top-seeding in Group 4 by beating France 3-1.

Nothing could detract from Algeria's amazing performance.

The Germans, two-time winners and joint favorites with Brazil, were expected to open their Group 2 campaign with a convincing victory.

But the unrated Algerians rewrote the scenario in a victory which outranked two other major cup upsets — North Korea's 1-0 defeat of Italy in 1966 and the United States' 1-0 win against England in 1950. Although highly rated, neither Italy nor England was regarded as a title favorite when they lost.

West German Coach Jupp Derwall, looking visibly shocked, shook his head in disbelief when it was all over and said: "I still can't believe it. It is beyond my understanding."

Derwall's Algerian counterpart, Rachid Mekloufi, was justifiably happier.

"This is the greatest day in the history of Algerian soccer," he said. "I still remember the two goals I scored when we defeated Germany in 1964 on our home ground. However, the victory today was much more important and there is not doubt that this is the greatest soccer victory for our country."

The European champions were rocked by a 52nd minute goal from Rabah Madjer but then Karl-Heinz Rummenigge tied it in the 67th minute.

The Algerians could have been expected to collapse at this stage but they had had other ideas and Lajdar Belumi scored the winning goal one minute later.

Argentina squad 'down' due to war, must beat Hungary

ALICANTE, Spain (UPI) — After Argentina's surrender in the Falklands, its soccer world champions play a key role in the battle for national prestige.

The defeat in the South Atlantic depressed the players — who lost their inaugural game — and Coach Cesar Luis Menotti now needs to boost the squad's morale before Friday's match with Hungary, players and team officials said.

"We are broken-hearted," said team captain Daniel Passarella, "but we are not seeking excuses. We must beat Hungary as we know that is the only way we can qualify for the second round."

"We are in a difficult position like all Argentinians, but we are trying to give the only answer we know, that is to play well," Menotti said at a morning squad training session Wednesday at the Villajoyosa soccer ground.

The defense of its world soccer title, which Argentina won at home in 1978, started disastrously last Sunday with a 1-0 defeat against Belgium.

Menotti said, however, that Hungary's record 10-1 victory over lightweight El Salvador did not rattle him. He was not impressed by Hungary's defense.

"I don't know if Hungary will change its lineup but it certainly will change its tactics against us," he said. "I see some problems in Hungary's defense."

Osvaldo Ardiles agreed with Passarella that the defeat in the Falklands weighed on the morale of the squad. Ardiles, still contracted with the English League club Tottenham, has felt more repercussions from the fighting in the South Atlantic than the rest of the team.

He has decided there he cannot continue to play in England, despite appeals by the Tottenham management for him to reconsider. He said he may now play in Italy, possibly for Sampdoria, although his future lies in the hands of Tottenham, which still holds his contract.

Ardiles suffered the loss of his cousin, Jose Ardiles, a jet pilot who was shot down during the South Atlantic conflict.

"Jose left a wife and two children. We are very sad because of the Falklands," Ardiles said. "We are now concentrating on putting things right, because in the next game against Hungary, our only chance is to win. We are very confident of victory."

Hanes recalls Sun Valley life

Hagerman man claims workers gave resort its early reputation

By LORAYNE O. SMITH
Times-News writer

HAGERMAN – Clyde "Lefty" Hanes says the "working people" at Sun Valley were what gave the resort its once well-deserved reputation of excellence.

The former guide, horse wrangler and carpenter should know. He was one of the working crowd at the Blaine County resort "off and on" for 30 years. But while the oldtimer stresses the gulf between the employees and guests they served, (a chasm easily spanned, he explained, by the workers' total indifference to world famous names) Hanes himself achieved recognition of a sort which may well outlast many of the would-be famous.

He was pictured on the Union Pacific calendar in about 1939, standing, an unidentified skier, on Dollar Mountain, looking down on the lodge, then the single building in an open bowl surrounded by snow-covered mountains.

His Sun Valley connection began when he carried water to construction workers building the lodge and extended from outdoor camaraderie with former movie greats Gary Cooper and Bing Crosby to a discipline run-in with one of the Robert Kennedy children.

Hanes said he left Ketchum in 1968 "because of the hippies."

Now 72, the longtime outdoorsman has for the past few years lived in a motorhome parked on sagebrush acreage he owns between Wendell and Hagerman.

He said he already was on the scene when Union Pacific magnate Averill Harriman decided to purchase the site and develop a watering hole for the wealthy back in 1936.

Hanes went to the Ketchum area in 1934 when his dad, Ed Hanes, known as "Pappy" had a logging contract on South Cherry Creek near Galena Summit. WPA men cut and picked the wood, which the elder Hanes then hauled to a sawmill on Senate Creek, operated by the late Fred Fovey of Hailey.

His dad's contract called for him to transport the logs to Gooding where they were used to build grandstands at the fairgrounds, according to Hanes. The family had come to Idaho in 1927, living for a time at Kimberly where they worked in the harvest.

Hanes, who was born March 26, 1910, in Parnell, Mo., and "grew up in the United States," said he was one of the first guides and horse trainers at the new resort which opened Dec. 19, 1936.

He and Bob Miles ran the Sun Valley stables and later Hanes operated his own saddle horse rental business in Ketchum during the 1940s.

But in between his many experiences at Sun Valley Hanes has variously worked in construction of Boulder Dam as a carpenter, in West Coast shipyards during World War II and for five seasons in Alaska, also as a carpenter. And, like many fellow citizens during the Depression he rode the freight trains, known as "Side door Pullmans."

He also was an outfitter on the middle fork of the Salmon River for several years.

Always independent, and single, Hanes never was one to worry about security. When things didn't suit him, he'd quit and always found another job. Over the years this not only has given him a valued education in the "school of hardknocks" but a lot of fun as well.

"Hell, I've made more money playing than I did working," he said.

Some of his choicest jobs were just accompanying people like Gary Cooper who loved to hunt bobcats over the Shoshone Ice Cave lava rocks.

"I was just the companion. When he killed something he wanted to dress it himself," Hanes said.

He also hunted pheasants with Cooper, tried to teach actress Norma Shearer how to shoot a .22 and went antelope hunting with author Ernest Hemingway, whom he liked.

He often took Sun Valley parties out hunting and served as a ski guide, not an instructor. This meant he went along wherever they wanted to go.

"I'd ski slow and sometimes sit on a bench," he said, "It's no fun (for the guest) to go alone and you had to have someone with you, anyway for safety," he explained.

In a resort well known for the anonymity afforded publicity shy guests, Hanes fit into the picture well.

"They (the wealthy) liked us because we never made over them," he said.

In his recollection of the many well known persons he has known over the years, Hanes seems mostly unimpressed. Some he liked, but Mickey Rooney, he said, "was a rat."

And Crooner Bing Crosby, he recalled, really loved winter at the resort and enjoyed nothing more than roughhousing with his children on the ice rink.

The resort today, he believes "is living off the glory of its past help."

When the Union Pacific owned the resort service was excellent because of the ability of the help, from chefs to waitresses, Hanes said.

Among his last jobs at Sun Valley was that of caretaker or watchman at Round House where one mealtime he observed the late Sen. Robert Kennedy's oldest boy attempting to sneak through the foodline without paying.

Hanes made him get back in line, but after he had paid, young Kennedy took the food and flung it down. Hanes said he "shook the hell" out of him, much to the amusement of Sen. John Glenn, a friend who often accompanied the family to help look after the large clan.

The boy's parents apparently were told their son's version of the incident, for Hanes said the next day he "heard about it" from his boss, Eddie Bennett, who assured him, "I'd have done the same thing."

One of Hanes' duties was to place logs at the four fireplaces at Round House. He said he's been told that there haven't been any logs available for the fireplaces since he quit.

Hanes lived briefly in Salmon in recent years and then was in Challis before moving to his present sagebrush location a few years ago.

Has he ever been married?

"Not yet," he grinned, allowing that some of his friends joke about "fixing him up" but he feels no great compulsion to seek wedded bliss after all these years alone.

Hanes' nickname of Lefty resulted from an accident with horses in construction work when he was 19 years old in which he lost his right arm.

Indicative of his spirit and determination, Hanes has spent his lifetime succeeding in jobs demanding physical strength and dexterity, often outworking men with two hands.

Although admitting he "knows he's old" Hanes is not sitting idle. Currently he is installing a pump on his acreage, trying "to get" a tomcat which is bothering his chickens and breaking a 2-year old mustang.

Although he hasn't ridden for several years, Hanes said he plans to do so soon, shrugging off any possible consequences of an accident.

"What the hell?" he said.

Women popping Valium affect efficiency of entire office

By DARRELL SIFFORD
Knight-Ridder Newspapers

The letter was from a 28-year-old woman who is one of three clerks in what she described as "a small office of a large institution" – an office that is commanded by a woman who is "moody, hostile and condescending to the staff."

Here is some of what she wrote:

"Would you consider writing about the problem of prescription drug abuse in the workplace? The other clerks are women in their late 50s who began working outside the home after their children were grown..... Both fit the unfortunate stereotype of the post-menopausal, covertly angry, 'nervous' woman. Both take Valium.

"The clerks' responsibilities are separate but interrelated. A good daily performance by one clerk is highly dependent upon the daily performances of the other two. ... The problem, in addition to the department head's lack of professionalism, is that when things in the office start getting hot, out come my two co-workers' Valium bottles. ... Soon they're floating off in their own little worlds.

"This is happening more frequently, as well as earlier in the day. I've seen these two women pop Valium before 9:15 in the morning, after they've concurred that the department head already seems to be in a bad mood. They joke about it: One will say: 'I don't feel like being here today.' Do you feel like being here today?' The other will reply: 'You're right; this isn't a good place to be today.' Pop, plop, sip, and away they go.

"Where does that leave me? Careless mistakes are made by these two women, who are only half-functioning, and the department head gets angry at us and the punishment starts. ... If these two were zapping out as often with alcohol or illegal drugs, they would have been fired months ago. In our workplace, though, Valium is OK."

The two who gulp their tranquilizers not only aren't reprimanded, she wrote, but in a sense they are encouraged because "both recently had their annual evaluations and passed."

The writer then posed two questions:

• Is there a way for her to get out of this mess? She badly needs the income, she said.

• Does Valium abuse exist in other offices?

I consulted Frederick J. Goldstein, who has a Ph.D. in pharmacology and who is a professor at Philadelphia College of Pharmacy and Science. In a nutshell here's what he said:

Nobody knows the extent of abuse of Valium-like compounds in the workplace, but whatever the level is, it's probably less than it was five years ago because consumption of these drugs has declined.

Has it really? Yes, said Goldstein, even though tranquilizers continue to be prescribed — and presumably abused by some — at high levels.

The decline has come, he said, because "the message finally has gotten to the medical community and perhaps to patients that it can be a problem. Some can become psychologically dependent, and, in some cases, there may be physical dependency, too."

Goldstein said almost a dozen Valium-like compounds are on the market today and that when he referred to Valium, he meant any or all of the compounds that carry the generic name of benzodiazepines.

Psychological dependency on Valium is not terribly uncommon, Goldstein said, and it usually does not have a physiological basis. "The person believes he needs the substance to function, that he's not his normal self without it. For some this can be cigarets, coffee or jogging — and the resulting feeling of well-being."

Physical dependency is something else, he said, and "the picture is confused. But people should know that the prescription can produce physical dependency under certain conditions of prolonged use ... and that this dependency can occur with therapeutic dosages."

How long is "prolonged"? What constitutes therapeutic dosages?

Goldstein answered the first but backed away from the second. Use for several months "begins to get prolonged," he said. He declined to fix a dosage beyond which physical dependency might occur, but, after some hassling, he cited a case from a psychiatric journal in which physical addiction was reported in a woman who took Valium for six years at a daily dosage of 15 to 20 milligrams.

However, he emphasized, there are more than a few physicians who insist that withdrawal systems don't occur when a patient suddenly breaks away from Valium. What can appear to be withdrawal, they say, is the return of the anxiety that existed before they began to take Valium.

The typical Valium user, said Goldstein, is a woman, and this has led to charges that "male chauvinist" physicians are to blame. This contention was shot down, he said, in an American Medical Association study in which it was established that male physicians dispensed no more Valium to women patients than did female physicians.

Then why do women take more Valium?

"I believe it may be because women are more verbal ... and more willing to discuss their problems. Their openness ... probably tends to lead to prescription of drugs like Valium. A man who has the John Wayne syndrome may not get as much Valium, but he'll perhaps drink more alcohol ...

"In the workplace it's difficult for women under stress to pull a hip flask and take a drink. But there is a certain 'legitimacy' to chemical dependency. Alcohol is not tolerated, but Valium is."

Little brown church in vale still conducts brisk business

NASHUA, Iowa (UPI) — The old church bells were ringing with enthusiasm, beckoning everyone from miles around to herald the marriage of another happy couple in the famed Little Brown Church in the Vale.

After the couple moved outside, still another nervous bride and groom took their places inside the sanctuary. Others waited patiently across the street in the basement of the pastor's house.

The Rev. John W. Christy performed 802 weddings last year in the historic church set among towering fir trees and blossoming wildflowers, the church that inspired William Pitts' song about "The Little Brown Church in the Vale."

A local legend tells of a "special effect" the church has. Some folks say only one in 10 marriages that began in the church have failed.

"Those were the statistics I was given when I came here four years ago," Christy said. "I personally would like to find the source of that. I know some of the people I've married here have been divorced."

He speculated the magic could come simply from being married with the blessing of the church or possibly from the ringing of the church bells.

"We have the couple ring the church bells as part of the wedding service," he said. "It's symbolic that they're starting their life working and pulling together by ringing the bells."

Weddings demand a lot of Christy's time. Often he'll find himself talking to one person in his office while "the doorbell's ringing and the telephone's ringing."

Brides and grooms who walk down the aisles of the musty but beautifully preserved church have ranged from below the legal age to well into retirement.

Many are third generation weddings, Christy said.

"It becomes a family tradition to want to be married here. Often friends and relatives are responsible in having the people come here for their wedding.

One recent wedding party included four generations of women on the bride's side. The bride's mother, 82, escorted her to the altar. The bride's daughter was matron of honor and the daughter's daughters were attendants.

No appointments are needed at Christy's busy chapel. But Iowa has a three-day waiting period for a marriage license.

Christy said he tries to make each wedding as personal as possible to avoid the appearance of a wedding mill.

"Many times guests have come up to me and told me the service was so meaningful, so personal and meant a lot to them," he said.

"One of the first letters I got was from a couple married on a day we had 18 weddings. They said even though there had been 16 or 17 weddings before theirs, 'We felt ours had been the only one that day.'"

Despite presiding over so many weddings, Christy sometimes finds himself choked up with emotion during a service.

"We've been able to become acquainted with some of the couples," he said. "And knowing a little bit of the circumstances, I have to be careful with my thoughts — especially with the older couples who have lost their (previous) mates. In that sense, it was a very emotional strain."

He also has seen his share of religious or racially mixed marriages — Protestants and Catholics, Protestants and Jews, blacks and whites.

"One bride was from Iowa (but) living in Washington, D.C.," he said. "The groom was from D.C. and he was Jewish. His grandparents especially didn't want them to get married, but they were at the wedding.

"After the wedding, the two grandparents thanked me and complimented me on how beautiful the service was. Then one of them said they thought the marriage was going to work."

Christy said the average wedding takes about 12 to 15 minutes. With a soloist, the service could stretch to about 20 minutes.

On Saturdays, the church's busiest day, couples are limited to two songs.

An organist costs $10 and a vocalist another $10. Christy said even pre-recorded music is available.

"Some want it, but most would rather have a silent wedding," he said. "They want to take advantage of it out here, where the only sound is the chirping of the birds and the roar of the trucks passing by on the highway."

The church can seat about 140 people on aging wooden benches.

One wedding had 260 people standing in the aisles, on the front porch and some even peering in through the windows.

There have been others for which Christy had to supply witnesses — for a $2 per person fee.

Christy said the renewal of wedding vows is a fast-growing tradition. He performed 15 such services last year.

"We have one couple who was married here four years ago," he said. "They said they're going to return here every year."

Howells Castle, constructed by Attorney B. P. Howells around 1900, will be viewed on tour

Oakley home tour set Saturday

OAKLEY — The annual Oakley tour of historical homes will be held Saturday, sponsored by the Historic Oakley Society.

The tours, to be conducted by Kent Hale and Marge Woodhouse, will begin at the Howells Opera House on Blaine Avenue, one block west of Main Street.

Starting at 10 a.m. they will leave every half hour with a lunch break from noon to 1 p.m. The last tour will start at 3 p.m. A slide presentation of historic buildings in the Oakley area will be narrated by Hale, a local stone mason and history buff.

Following the slides, each touring group will be guided on a walking tour of some of the nearby buildings. Included will be the Victorian Howells castle, the Cutler Worthington and Marcus Funk residences, the old jail that housed Diamondfield Jack and others.

Cost of the tour is $2.50 per person. Organizational groups are welcome.

The Cutler Worthington residence is noted for first story stonework and its spire

Additional salt labeling proposed

WASHINGTON (UPI) — New rules proposed by the Reagan administration would require food manufacturers to label foods to reveal their content of sodium, which is linked to high blood pressure.

The rules would require manufacturers who use nutrition labels to list how much sodium is in their processed foods and would regulate conditions under which products can claim to be "low sodium," "reduced sodium" or "sodium-free."

Although public interest groups and some congressmen want mandatory sodium disclosure and limits on sodium content, the administration opposed such requirements.

The FDA, which began a voluntary sodium labeling program last year, says it expects a third of the processed foods it regulates to have voluntary sodium labeling within a year, compared with 13 percent in 1981.

"Along with other voluntary efforts undertaken by the food industry with our encouragement, the proposed regulations will do much to help Americans reduce their salt and sodium intake," Arthur Hull Hayes, Food and Drug Administration commissioner, said Tuesday.

The rules, to be published in the Federal Register Friday for 60 days of required public comment, probably would not take effect until the summer of 1985, said FDA spokesman James Greene.

Hospital volunteer workshop June 23

TWIN FALLS — A regional workshop for the area's junior hospital volunteers will be held Wednesday at the Magic Valley Regional Medical Center in Twin Falls.

Young volunteers are expected from MVRMC, St. Benedict's Hospital in Jerome, Cassia Memorial Hospital in Burley, Idaho Falls Consolidated Hospital in Idaho Falls, St. Anthony's Hospital in Pocatello and Madison Memorial Hospital in Rexburg.

Billed as a "PAC-IN" of "information, picnic and fun," the workshop will feature discussions on clothing, diction and exercise, as well as lectures on patient-related topics. A lunch will be provided.

All programs will be held in the hospital annex, conference Room F, from 9 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. The schedule of events is:

- 9 a.m. Greetings and introduction by Sue Summers, the MVRMC community-relations director.
- 9:30 a.m. "First Impressions: Making Your Appearance Work for You," presented by Carol Carlson, Mode Ltd. fashion coordinator. Carol Pohanka, the co-owner with Carlson of the Carol and Carol Charm School, will give a lesson in speech etiquette and diction.
- 10:30 a.m. "The Elderly Patient and You," by Pat Woods, a registered nurse and MVRMC's quality-assurance coordinator.
- 11:15 a.m. "Jazzercise for Flexibility, Coordination and Stamina," presented by Carol Perea Montgomery, a former Broadway dancer and dance-exercise teacher.
- Noon: "The Colonel's Complete Chicken Dinner" on the hospital grounds.
- 1 p.m. "Dealing with Patient-Family Emotions," presented by Scott Williams, a psychologist for the Idaho Department of Health and Welfare. A question-and-answer session will follow.
- 2 p.m. Film: "Don't Bug Me."
- 2:30 p.m. Group activity.

The registration deadline is this Friday. A $2.50 check for the lunch, payable to MVRMC, will confirm the registration. For more information, call Sue Summers at 737-2167.

Teeth can upset sleep

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (UPI) — Sleep researchers have known for years tossing and turning during the night can affect the way one feels the next morning, but little attention was given to tooth clenching.

Some researchers now believe many jaw joint or jaw muscle problems are related to how much one unconsciously contracts his jaw muscles during sleep.

Researchers at the University of Texas Health Science Center at San Antonio recently devised a machine that measures the jaw activity during sleeping hours. The process is designed to improve diagnosis and treatment of jaw joint problems that affect an estimated 10 million Americans.

The process consists of attaching three tiny wires to the upper jaw to measure the muscle activity and feed the information to a small machine placed on the pillow. The following morning, the small portable muscle activity monitor, which looks like a hand-held calculator, is taken to a dentist, who determines how much the jaws contracted during the night.

The machine, developed by Dr. John Rugh, associate professor of restorative dentistry, and Chuck Burgar, a biomedical engineer and second-year medical student at the science center, records the intensity and length of each muscle contraction and stores the information in its memory. When the display button is pressed, the monitor shows a reading of an ongoing muscle contraction.

"Most of the problems come from using the jaw muscles too much. One type of overuse is from psychological stress in the form of teeth clenching," said Dr. M. Franklin Dolwick, D.M.D., an associate professor of oral and maxillofacial surgery at the health science center.

Friends are invited to call between 2 and 4 p.m.

Frostenson and the former Gladys Hall were married June 15, 1932, in LaGrande, Ore., and began farming the same year in the Manard area on Camas Prairie near Fairfield where they still farm.

MR. AND MRS. STANLEY PICKETT

MURTAUGH — Mr. and Mrs. Stanley L. (Shirley) Pickett will celebrate their 50th anniversary on Saturday at an open house at their home one mile east of Murtaugh.

Friends, relatives and neighbors are invited to call between 3 and 8 p.m.

Picket and the former Jessie Nielson were married on June 17, 1932, in Oakley.

Picket served as president of the Magic Valley Beet Growers Association, the Murtaugh Highway District and the State of Idaho District Better Roads and Highway and as a board member of the hospital and the school.

Mrs. Picket was hostess for state highway conventions for many years and taught oil painting and sewing. She is a board member of Pickett Manufacturing Inc.

Hosting the event will be their three children, Paul Pickett of Murtaugh, Robin Dee Spencer of Twin Falls and Shirleen Okelberry of Las Vegas, Nev. The couple has 14 grandchildren and 10 great-grandchildren.

MR. AND MRS. LYNNVILLE BROWN

FILER — Mr. and Mrs. Lynnville Brown of Filer celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary June 12 at a reception at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Brown of Filer. A family dinner was held following the reception at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Lyle Williamson of Filer.

Brown and the former Theo Williamson were married June 18, 1932, in Elko, Nev. They have lived in Twin Falls County since their marriage. Brown farmed in the Filer area, then served as Idaho state warehouse inspector until his retirement.

Mrs. Brown was secretary at Filer High School for several years until her retirement. The couple lives on their farm east of Filer.

Hosting the event was the couple's four sons, Harris Brown, Lynnville (Bud) Brown Jr., Phillip Brown and David Brown.

Blood drawing scheduled

TWIN FALLS — The Red Cross Bloodmobile will be in Twin Falls Monday from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. and Tuesday from 2 to 6 p.m. at the First United Presbyterian Church.

A special request is being made for an additional ten O negative blood donors, according to Lydia Dudley, blood chairman for the Twin Falls Red Cross Chapter. Donors are reminded to eat a good meal at least one hour before donating.

Stolen check to be replaced

By JUDY BENGE
Knight-Ridder Newspapers

Q. In August 1976, my mother was assaulted and robbed of her purse containing her July benefit check. We notified both her local Social Security office and the Treasury Department.

In September 1976, we received a letter telling us an investigation had begun, but that's all we've ever heard. Perhaps you can help get my mother a replacement check. — R.N.Z.

A. Social Security investigated your mother's missing check. But, they reviewed 1975 records instead of 1976. At our request, the correct check — July 1976 — has been reported missing to the Treasury Department. When it has been established that it was fraudulently endorsed, your mother will be issued a replacement check.

Q. I had surgery in 1980. Part of my operation was cosmetic, but part was for an obstruction in my breathing. Yet, Medicare denied the entire claim. My doctor sent Medicare a letter detailing the part of the surgery that wasn't cosmetic. I believe I should be reimbursed. I wrote again in 1981 but heard nothing. Can you help? — B.W.

A. Although the time limit for your claim has expired, Medicare made a special exception because of your written requests in 1980 and again in 1981. Your claim has been reconsidered. Your doctor charged $1,500, and Medicare has allowed $467 of the noncosmetic charges. You'll get a check for 80 percent after your claim has been reprocessed.

Q. I will be filing for my benefits in 1983, when I turn 62. Social Security informed me that my earnings of $46,630 through the years will allow me a monthly benefit of $192. But, instead of that amount, the office said I will be paid a larger amount from my husband's record. Does that mean I will receive no advantage of my own contributions and that if I had never worked I'd have been paid the same amount regardless? — S.S.

A. Social Security compares the benefits you would get based on your earnings and those you would get as a spouse — one-half your husband's. If half of your husband's benefit is larger, the difference is added to your benefit. You told us your husband's benefit is larger, so you will get a combined benefit equalling 37½ percent of your husband's. You can't get 50 percent because you're filing three years before the normal retirement age of 65.

If you hadn't worked and paid into Social Security, you still would have qualified for a wife's benefit and received 37½ per cent of your husband's benefit.

Q. My twin daughters get $214 each in benefits. They use this money to pay for their college tuition and room and board. I read that the student's benefit will be eliminated in August. Will my daughters lose their benefits? — R.H.

A. No. Your daughters meet the requirements to continue drawing their benefits; their benefits began before September 1981, and they were enrolled as full-time students before May 1982.

Their benefits will continue until 1985 or graduation, whichever occurs first. But there are some changes. No benefits will be paid from May through August each year, plus their benefits will be reduced by 25 percent each September.

Elderly warned on heat risk

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Now that the cold weather is over and with it the risks of hypothermia to the elderly, presidential assistant Virginia Knauer is warning people over 65 to guard against heat stress.

Mrs. Knauer, director of the Office of Consumer Affairs, said in a report that heat stress can lead to heat exhaustion, heart failure and strokes and "may well be a life threatening problem for the elderly this summer."

At an energy conference last winter, Mrs. Knauer said, "Energy issues are truly life and death issues for the elderly. The ultimate risk is death from hypothermia or heat stress."

Now that hot weather has returned, the consumer office is warning that the "body needs time to adjust to hot weather.

"A sudden increase in temperature, especially at this time of year, is particularly serious because it can place a dangerous strain on the heart and blood vessels before the body can acclimate itself."

The report said "the blistering heat during the summer of 1980 claimed several thousand more lives than during previous years. The death toll was highest among people over 65."

The elderly are more vulnerable, the report said, because they do not adjust as well to heat, they perspire less and are more likely to have health problems requiring medicines that work against the body's natural defenses to adjust to heat.

The report said the warning signs of serious heat stress are dizziness, rapid heartbeat, diarrhea, nausea, cramps, throbbing headache, dry skin, chest pain, great weakness, mental changes, breathing problems and vomiting.

"If you experience any of them," the report advises, "call a doctor immediately."

The report offers the following "special precautions":

- Curtail physical activity during extremely hot weather.
- Avoid hot foods and heavy meals.
- Watch salt use and don't take salt tablets without a doctor's permission.
- Avoid alcohol which increases the rate of water loss and could promote a sense of well-being, making you less aware of the danger signs of heat stress.
- If living alone, ask neighbors to check on you regularly.
- Take the heat seriously, pay attention to the danger signs and call your doctor at the first sign of trouble.

The report recommended using air conditioning or fans, taking cool baths or showers, wearing loose fitting, lightweight, light-colored clothing and hats and umbrellas and increasing water intake.

Medicine can create sickness

By PETER LARSON
Orlando Sentinel

ORLANDO, Fla. — A 7-year study of 4,000 elderly Florida residents indicates too much medicine is making many of them sick.

The study, conducted by University of Florida researchers and a Dunedin, Fla., physician, found some senior citizens were taking 17 different medications a day. Only about 1 percent of those studied were taking no medicine at all.

Chronic use of prescription and over-the-counter drugs is making some elderly patients feel worse, said Dr. William Hale, head of the research project, one of the largest studies of its kind ever undertaken.

"In many instances it is contributing to some of the symptoms and problems people are having," he said. "This has not been conclusively demonstrated, but the tendency is certainly there."

Although most drugs are intended for short-term use, elderly patients often take them regularly, the study said. Seventy percent of the drugs the patients use are prescription drugs, and their use of prescription medicines increased three times as fast as their use of non-prescription drugs, according to the study.

The study turned up several commonly abused drugs:

- Sleeping pills — Many members of the group got no benefit from sleeping pills, and in some cases, the pills seemed to contribute to insomnia. A large percentage of patients have been taking them daily for two years or more.
- Diuretics — These drugs are used to treat high blood pressure by reducing the amount of fluid in the body. Durietics can cause a serum potassium deficiency in elderly patients, affecting the heart.
- Laxatives — Despite the risks of chronic laxative use, 16 percent of the women and 12 percent of the men were using them regularly. Half of these patients took laxatives every day, and two-thirds had been taking them for two years or more.
- Aspirin Phenacetin Caffeine — This painkiller can cause kidney damage when taken in large quantities with other drugs.

The study involved nearly 4,000 Dunedin residents, all over 65 years old, who report for annual checkups. None of the patients in the study are in hospitals or nursing homes.

"This is one of the largest groups of ambulatory patients ever studied," said Hale. "In the past, most studies were confined to people in nursing homes or hospitals. We're really opening up a wealth of information about their diets, their drug use, their exercise habits and lifestyles."

Crash victims taken for a ride by 'friendly' lawyer

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN
Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: My parents were involved in an automobile accident four years ago. They were both hospitalized, but thank God they came through it all right. The driver of the other car was at fault, as several witnesses testified.

The driver of the other car was well-insured and my parents were advised to sue. They consulted a lawyer who was also a personal friend and a member of their church. The lawyer worked hard on the case for several years and my parents were awarded a very large amount of money. I was thrilled for them because they were retired, living on a fixed income, and this money would enable them to travel and enjoy a few luxuries.

When my parents received the money, their lawyer told them that he needed to "borrow" the whole amount to pay off some debts. He said he was so deeply in debt he couldn't even tell his wife!

My parents were shocked, but because the lawyer had helped them so much, they turned over the whole amount to him.

I am terribly upset about this because there is nothing in writing, nor was anything said about how the money will be paid back or when. I have a feeling my parents will never see any part of the money. What do you suggest?

— CONCERNED DAUGHTER

DEAR CONCERNED: There are many unanswered questions here. What, if anything, did the lawyer tell your parents when he "borrowed" the money? And how long has he had it? On the face of it, it would appear that your parents were taken advantage of, in which case they will need an ETHICAL lawyer to retrieve the money owed them.

DEAR ABBY: The letter stating that two men were legally married to each other in Colorado is absolutely correct. Since County Clerk Clela Rorex could find nothing in the law that forbids one man from marrying another, she issued the license. After the men married, there was a lot of publicity in the local newspapers.

Soon afterward, a local cowboy brought his horse down to the office of the county clerk demanding a marriage license. He said that he and his mare had known each other for a long time, were very compatible, and since there was nothing in the law specifically prohibiting marriage between a man and his horse, he wanted a license.

The request was denied. Would you (or your readers) care to comment?

IT HAPPENED IN BOULDER

DEAR HAPPENED: I've heard of some pretty weird horsing around, but a cowboy leading his horse down the bridal path would be a nightmare!

DEAR ABBY: Our son informed us that he has herpes. After he bragged to us that he had won the bed-hopping contest at college, we were not surprised. ("Bed-hopping" is a game the college boys play. The fellow who has hopped into the most beds in one week is the champion.) We are far from proud and feel sorry for the girls. Too bad they don't know how they are being used these days.

My reason for writing is to ask how contagious herpes is. Should we keep our son's towels separate? And how about his dishes and silverware? Also, is there any danger in kissing him? We are concerned for the rest of the family.

— UPSET PARENTS

DEAR UPSET: According to Dr. William Wickett, author of the excellent new book, "Herpes: Cause and Control" (Pinnacle Press), if lesions (sores) are apparent on your son's lips, do not kiss him.

His towels should be washed separately, and if possible sun-dried. His dishes and silverware should be scalded. (The dishwasher turned to high heat will sterilize them.)

Dr. Lamb

Lack of blood flow problem

By LAWRENCE LAMB, M.D.
Newspaper Enterprise Association

DEAR DR. LAMB — For the last five or six years I've been having sudden "weak spells" during which I am partially conscious and my legs and arms are paralyzed, with a sensation of blood rushing to my extremities. I have recovered fairly well between spells.

My doctor has prescribed Norpace, Persantine and other medicines but has failed to tell me what these attacks are. However, from hospital records I've learned that I have transient cerebral ischemic attacks. All my symptoms correspond exactly to one of your columns about such attacks.

In small towns doctors are very busy and don't have time to inform me on just what I should avoid or do. I'm 71 years old and do my own work and walk for one hour daily. Would you send me any information about this trouble and what I can expect?

DEAR READER — Remember that ischemia means lack of blood flow and according to your records you are having transient periods (attacks) of ischemia to part of your brain. These behave exactly like a stroke, in that you can have temporary loss of function of an arm, leg, loss of speech or other symptoms we associate with a stroke.

The cardinal difference is the short duration and the fact that once the attack is over there is no residual damage. Suddenly a paralyzed leg or arm will function again.

The transient nature means the cause of blockage of an artery to part of the brain must be temporary. Some may be caused from disease in the internal carotid artery in the neck. Cholesterol crystals or even clumps of platelets formed over a fatty-cholesterol deposit or even a small portion of a clot may pass through the arteries to the brain. Another possible cause is an irregularity of the heart that momentarily affects blood flow to the brain.

Anyone who has had a transitory ischemic attack should have a careful neurological examination. That includes examination of the arteries to the brain with arteriograms. Some patients need treatment to prevent a future stroke.

To give you more information I am sending you The Health Letter 16-6, What You Need to Know About Strokes. Others who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I am a woman, 53 years old, and have had very few sick days in my life. I do not drink intoxicating beverages but I am a heavy smoker. I have only had heartburn about twice in my life until about a month ago. For the past month I have had heartburn quite often. Someone told me that heartburn often precedes a heart attack. Is this true?

DEAR READER — Heartburn is commonly caused by irritation of the lower esophagus just above where it joins the stomach. Usually it is from a backward leakage of acid contents from the stomach.

No, it does not precede heart attacks, although some problems such as esophageal spasm that may occur with it may be hard to separate from heart pain.

You may have less heartburn if you stop smoking and give up coffee (including the decaffeinated brands), tea and colas. Have your doctor check you for a hiatal hernia on your next examination or sooner. It may be associated with a leakage from your stomach.

Drug effective

A new once-a-day drug that is effective against osteoarthritis and rheumatoid arthritis is now available, reports the drug's manufacturer, Eli Lilly and Co., now that it has received government approval.

Lilly says tests on 2,200 patients have revealed the drug is very effective in reducing the symptoms of the arthritic conditions. The drug, Oraflex, has been shown to suppress bone damage and thus halt arthritis.

One of the chief advantages of the anti-inflammatory drug is that it does not use steroids, which have numerous side effects. Some people do become overly sensitive to sunlight when they take Oraflex, however.

Change proposed in medical training

By LORETTA McLAUGHLIN
Boston Globe

BOSTON — A new pathway for the training of doctors has been proposed by Daniel C. Tosteson, the dean of Harvard Medical School.

The route would be neither shorter nor longer than the current nine-year course of four years of college, four years of medical school and one year of residency training.

Rather, it would bring students into medical school sooner — by the junior year in college — and keep them together longer — through their first year of hospital training. The program would be the first of its kind in the country.

"Emphasis would be placed on the development of insight and emotional maturity necessary to cope with the human disasters that command the attention of physicians," Tosteson said in making the proposal.

Stressing that the plan is still in a preliminary phase, Tosteson said in a telephone interview, the central point is to arouse interest in "the need for a single faculty to think of the whole sweep of medical training."

As it is now, he said, medical education is divided among three faculties: undergraduate school, medical school and clinical training in a hospital. Beyond that, medical information is both constantly growing and changing, threatening to overwhelm traditional approaches to medical training.

Tosteson first broached the proposal at a May symposium at Harvard Medical School and asked for 30 faculty members to volunteer to work with him to develop a detailed program.

A trial with the new program, limited to 25 students, could begin as soon as September, 1983, he said.

Under the program, students would be eligible to enter Harvard Medical after two years of college. No special courses would be required. Thereafter, students would spend four years in academic medical studies and a final three in clinical work.

Further, Tosteson's goal is to use the program to begin "a general transformation of the style of learning," combining a greater use of computerized instruction and training along with small-group, problem-solving studies.

The program, he said, would be designed to improve:

• Character. "I think we must seek ways to be more effective in selecting and supporting students in developing the behaviors we desire in physicians."

• Cognitive style. "There are remarkable new ways for acquiring, storing and analyzing data and we should very consciously attempt to make them a part of our techniques for learning in medicine."

• Content. "We must ask in a hard, clear way what is the justification for including this body of knowledge or that bit of information in a course."

• Continuity. "There is something dysfunctional about the separation of the continuum of medical education into college, medical school and residency training. . . . These three segments do not usually plan and work together."

While there is little disagreement with the broad aims, some faculty members question some aspects of the proposal.

One Harvard Medical faculty member, Jesuit psychiatrist Edwin Cassem, said he doubted that the qualities of character and commitment can be taught and whether college sophomores are mature enough to begin medical school. Neurologist Norman Geschwind, chairman of the medical school's committee on curriculum, also questions students' readiness, emotionally or intellectually, to start medical school after two years of college.

COORS IS MADE FOR THE WAY YOU REALLY LIKE TO DRINK BEER.

There's only one beer that's naturally made for the times when just one beer won't do. Only Coors is specially made for the way you really like to drink beer. Made naturally pure and fresh with pure Rocky Mountain spring water, always packaged and shipped cold to avoid extreme, taste-killing heat, and always stocked fresh so your last Coors tastes as fresh as your first.

NOTHING UNNATURAL EVER GOES INTO COORS.

Most beers start with chemically altered tap water. And then go on to use additives and preservatives.

Not Coors. Only Coors beer starts naturally pure, naturally fresh with pure Rocky Mountain spring water.

And only Coors stays pure. Brewed more slowly, and naturally aged longer with no additives or preservatives.

COORS BEATS THE HEAT THAT KILLS BEER TASTE.

Extreme heat destroys beer taste. In fact, because of the way other beers are processed and shipped, they are exposed to 140 degrees of this taste-killing heat even before they reach your store.

Not Coors. Only Coors is always packaged and shipped cold from the brewery to your store. In fact, Coors is kept cold longer than any other beer —and that means fresher tasting beer for you.

Coors.

MADE FOR THE WAY YOU REALLY LIKE TO DRINK BEER.

Sure, it would be easier to allow Coors to be exposed to extreme heat. And maybe some beer drinkers wouldn't taste the difference. But we think real beer drinkers would. Because keeping it cold is the only way to assure fresh beer taste.

WE AGE COORS AT THE BREWERY, NOT IN THE STORE.

Any beer can get stale as it sits in your store. In spite of this fact, other leading beers can sit on the shelf for up to 120 days. By our standards, that's not fresh beer.

And that's not Coors. Coors takes absolutely no chances when it comes to fresh beer taste. That's why Coors has a 60-day freshness policy, the strictest freshness policy in the beer industry. This policy assures that Coors is always stocked fresh so your last Coors tastes as fresh as your first.

Coors after Coors, it's always first-beer fresh. That's why Coors is the beer made for the way you really like to drink beer.

SEE FOR YOURSELF.

Of course, the best way to experience the brewery-fresh taste of Coors is to sample a glass or two. But if you'd like to compare Coors' freshness to any other beer, try this test:

Take two clean glasses. Pour one half-full with brewery-fresh Coors and the other half-full with another beer. Let them sit until they reach room temperature.

Smell each. See which one smells fresh and pure.

Taste each. See which one tastes clean and fresh.
